TAFT AT BEVERLY FOR DAY

President Taft arrived at his Summer home at Beverly at 9.18 and his first move was to hustle into his golf togs and start for the Myopia Golf Club links for a game of golf.

"Well, Beverly looks better than ever to me," he said, taking a deep-chested draught of Beverly air as he stepped off the train and helped his wife and Miss Delia Torrey, his aunt, into the waiting automobile.

Three hundred men, women and children crowded around the president's automobile and cheered him and his party as he took a seat beside his wife and "Aunt Della." It was the first visit of Miss Torrey to the new Taft home and the President was kept busy pointing out to her the points of interest as newspaper photographers took a number of pictures. Mrs. Taft looked very well and said she was glad to arrive in Beverly for the Summer.

Charlie Taft and Major Archibald Butt, the President's aide, completed the Taft party. Charlie's first exclamation on getting off the train was:

"Gee, Major, I want to get over to Wenham lake right off for some more fishing."

Charlie began to prepare his fishing kit as soon as he reached the Summer home.

Secret Service Men Here.

The Taft special arrived at the Montsweag station at 9.18 o'clock, following the regular train out of Boston. On the special besides the President's party were secret service men James Sloan, Richard Jervis, George A. Prnester, Joseph W. Murphy and J. H. Wheelwright. The train was in charge of Henry Scandrett, superintendent of the Portland division of the Boston & Maine.

"Parramatta," the President's new Summer home, is within 200 yards of the railroad station and it was but a few minutes before the President and party were safely in their new home.

The President's special car Ideal came into the South Station on the Federal express and was switched to the Boston & Maine tracks for Beverly. The Federal express arrived in the station at 8.56, fifty-six minutes late. At the station a detail of policemen under Sergeants Kirk and Murphy were on hand to keep possible crowds back, but there was little need, as not over forty people were at the train.

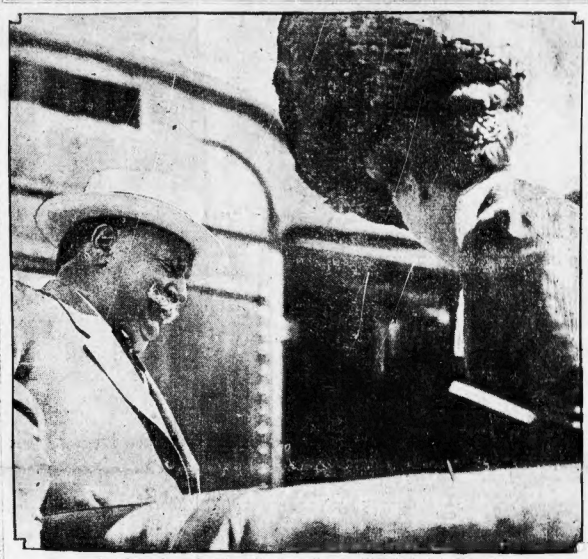
Starts Away Sunday.

The President leaves Beverly for Albany, N. Y., on Sunday night and will be in Indianapolis for the Fourth of July as the guest of former Vice-President Fairbanks.

He will review the parade there on Independence Day, lunch with Mr. Fairbanks and see a prearranged head-on collision at the State fair grounds. On the evening of the Fourth the President will speak at a banquet of the Marion Club at Indianapolis, and it is expected that he will say some pertinent things regarding reciprocity and his attitude on the tariff revision bills at this session. He will return to Washington July 5.

Mrs. Taft will remain in Beverly all Summer, but the President will probably be detained in Washington until Congress adjourns. He will make frequent trips to Beverly for the week-end.

President and Mrs. Taft Arriving at Beverly To-day



Snapshot to-day at Beverly railroad station by AMERICAN staff photographer.

"Well, Beverly looks better than ever to me," said President Taft as he stepped off the train to-day to go to his Summer home. He arrived there at 9.18 a. m. Three hundred men, women and children were at the station to greet him and Mrs. Taft, "Charlie," his son, and "Aunt Della" Torrey, his aunt.

President Taft put on his golf clothes when he arose this morning. The first thing that he did when he arrived at his Summer home in Beverly was to hunt up his golf clubs and then motor to the Myopia Hunt Club for his first game of golf this Summer.

"Gee, Major Butt, I want to go over to Wenham Lake right off for some more fishing," said "Charlie" Taft when he arrived at Beverly. And he did.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, July 1.—Determined to make the series three out of four in their favor, the Red Sox faced the New York Yankees in the final setto this afternoon. There was another crowd for the Red Sox in defeating Hal Chase's team, in that a victory for Cleveland over Chicago to-day would place the Red Sox back in the first division and in line to grab third place from New York the coming week.

Manager Donovan was well satisfied with the fighting spirit his men are showing in the recent games. It is never giving up till the last man has been called out that wins. This, too, pleases the fans, the grand rally of yesterday in overcoming a load of 5 to 0, no doubt bringing out the half holiday crowd of to-day.

DECORDOVA SUIT IS DISMISSED

Judge Robert Grant in the Suffolk Probate Court dismissed the petition of Mrs. Alma H. de Cordova, brought for separate maintenance against her husband, Dana de Cordova, a well known lawyer and clubman, in dismissing the petition Judge Grant made this formal note:

"This petition is to be dismissed. The respondent appears to have used insulting and harsh language to his wife; but the chief and underlying cause of the discord between them was her refusal to live with him unless her brother remained a member of the household. I do not think under all the circumstances that she is living apart from him for justifiable cause. She has left her husband and is not obliged to return to him unless she chooses, but I cannot find on the evidence that she is entitled to a decree establishing the status she seeks."

Mrs. de Cordova is now living with her brother at his Summer home on Marblehead Neck.

COURT DISMISSES SUIT AGAINST FOSS

Governor Foss has won again over Orrhan J. Daly, the wealthy House dealer, who has brought numerous suits against him. The full bench of the Supreme Court decides in the Governor's favor by dismissing a bill in equity brought by Daly to enforce the restrictions on Foss's property on Newbury street. The decision affirms a decree of Judge Fessenden of the Superior Court. The bill is dismissed on the ground that Daly failed to prosecute his appeal within the prescribed time limit. Daly owns property on Newbury street near the building owned by Foss.

ATWOOD FLIES OVER NEW YORK

circled over the financial district, and then shot across the bay to Governor's Island, where he landed at 10:25.

He had been in the air three hours and twenty minutes, having left New London at 7:05 a. m.

Down the East River.

It was a glorious joy ride through the heavens," said Atwood to the first army officer who greeted him at Governor's Island.

"We were never in danger. The weather was ideal. I never expect anything better."

Atwood first came in sight of New York as he flying down the East River. After describing a wide circle over the upper bay, he swept inland, and, flying at 1,500 feet, marked a wide loop over the city's great downtown skyscrapers, including the entire financial district in a circle that had the Battery and Fulton street in its circumference.

Then, still flying at a height of 1,500 feet, the daring young birdman made a sensational loop over the Singer building tower, braving a sharp wind in a series of abrupt turns, his biplane tilted at times until it seemed as if both Atwood and the mechanician would go overboard. The crowds that lined the downtown rooftops got their last view of the aeroplane when Atwood headed toward Governor's Island and drove the machine almost straight down until it was just below the towering sky-like mass of the giant buildings that line the North River front.

It is estimated that fully 5,000,000 people saw Atwood skim over New York. Traffic was halted in the lower streets, and the roofs of the tall buildings were crowded. Every window was dotted with the heads of men and women. Employees of the financial district was almost suspended while Atwood was in the range of vision of the brokers.

All those who had field glasses levelled them at the strange bird-like machine which was tapering across the sky. Lower New York was never so excited over accounts before. Even messenger boys paused to gaze at the strange spectacle.

Two women, who were gazing upward at the flying machine saw it suddenly dip when over the lofty Singer tower and vanish. They explained afterward that they feared Atwood would be impaled on the flagstaff on the dome.

After landing at Governor's Island Atwood thickened with his machine for an hour and finally decided that he would not fly to Mineola until to-morrow. His flight from New London had exhausted his supply of gasoline, but after securing enough to partly fill his tank he consented to make an exhibition flight for the benefit of assembled newspaper and picture photographers who had arrived too late to catch him landing.

Army Officer as Passenger.

He rose from the field at 11:50 and circled around over the bay. He carried as a passenger on this trip an army officer.

After a number of daring evolutions, At wood returned to the island and landed at 11:58.

Atwood's companion was Lieutenant H. L. Fickle of the Twenty-third Coast Artillery. The machine swept around the bay in great circles, paid a visit to Madame Liberty and once more headed toward the water and between two ferry boats of the municipal ferry that it looked as if the aircraft would be wrecked against the side of one of them.

After this little audition to the joy riding, Atwood said that he would go to breakfast and spend the time of the delaying ground.

Atwood with his mechanician, Fred Fleet, as passenger, was first sighted at Bridgeport as he was entering Long Island Sound coming over from Stratford. He was coming along the line of the coast and off Stratford Point went out across the water, crossing Bridgeport Harbor at an elevation of 500 feet. He continued going the west, sailing off the shore and heading for Fairfield in the direction of New York.

Watched by Great Crowd.

Watched by a large crowd of enthusiastic admirers, Atwood started from the Armstrong ball field at New London. The sun shone from a cloudless sky. There was a breeze just strong enough to be invigorating.

"Good luck," chorused the crowd as the aviator soared into the air and circled the field half a dozen times like a bird getting its bearings. The crowd increased until there were more than 1,000 men, women and children gazing at the aeronaut.

Finally Atwood headed out over the sound toward New York, shooting through the air at from fifty to sixty miles an hour.

Bulletins told of his flight over Connecticut as follows:

Aviator Atwood passed over Saybrook, Ct., at 7:20, and Clinton at 7:27.

Atwood flew over Guilford at 7:50.

Aviator Atwood passed over Branford, Ct., at 8:, 30.

Aviator Atwood passed over New Haven at 8:10, and did not stop.

Aviator Atwood passed over Milford at 8:33.

Atwood passed Stratford at 8:38.

Atwood passed over Seaside Park, Bridgeport, headed for Fairfield, at 8:44 a. m.

Atwood passed over South Norwalk at 8:50 a. m.

Over Larchmont at 9:15.

Atwood passed over the Indian Harbor Yacht Club at Greenwich, bound directly west, at 9 o'clock. He appeared to be following the railroad tracks to New York. He was 100 feet in the air.

Atwood passed Portchester, twenty-eight miles from New York, at 9:05. At 9:15 he passed Larchmont, sailing high and fast toward New York.

Atwood lowered his aeroplane at Armstrong Park, New London, at 7:05.

He arrived over New Haven at 8:10, after a thrilling trip along the sound shore. He ascended into the air and sailed over Saybrook at 7:20, flying at a distance of about 2,500 feet. It is estimated.

At East River he descended within 300 feet of a passing train, taking a daring risk to dip that close to it, when the passengers. He immediately ascended and turning toward the sound shore, passed over the summer cottages, arousing many persons who could plainly hear the whirr of the propeller.

Followed Railroad Tracks.

At Guilford the cottagers plainly saw the aviator, who was within a few hundred feet of the ground. He went out nearly over the Sound and then, turning, went back to the town, evidently looking for the Shore Line railroad tracks, which he followed closely to New Haven, passing Branford a few minutes before 8 o'clock. He passed nearly over the railroad station at New Haven and followed the tracks closely to Milford, where he passed so near the town that the noise aroused the villagers, who all turned out to see and to cheer the aviator.

Atwood passed Stamford at 8:50, having covered nearly 100 miles in an hour and forty-five minutes, without a stop.

Route Covered by Atwood in Remarkable Flight

Photograph of Harry N. Atwood, who made world's greatest trip in airship, is shown. Map shows course he took from Boston to host races at New London, and also to-day's 110-mile continuation of trip over New York harbor and Singer building.

FOSS REJECTS L COMPROMISE

Governor Foss has made it plain that he will not accept any compromise on the two bills now before the Legislature for the lease of Boston's subways and tunnels to the Elevated railroad, and the acquiring of the West End Railroad by the Elevated.

The stockholders of the West End want 7½ per cent. dividend guaranteed, instead of 7 per cent., as the bill providing for consolidation provides.

The proposition put up to the Governor was that the West End common stockholders would agree to a consolidation of the West End and the L if they were guaranteed a dividend of 7½ per cent. Their first demand was for 8 per cent.

Governor Foss lost no time in making it plain to those who carried the compromise to him that he would not sign any bill providing for the consolidation of the two companies which carried a provision for a greater dividend rate to the West End than 7 per cent.

The Boston L and the spokesmen for the protective committee of the holders of the common stock in the West End were ready to agree on a plan for the consolidation on a basis of 7½ per cent.

The large holders of West End seemed were willing to promise to vote their shares in favor of the consolidation on that basis, and the L directors who talked with counsel for the West End protective committee said that compromise was agreeable to the L.

Governor Foss reiterated what he has already said through the AMERICAN, that the West End stockholders were not entitled to more than 7 per cent. under the consolidation plan.

Senator Tinkham said to-day that all the people had to do to win their fight against the Elevated Railroad and the West End stockholders was to keep a sharp watch on the Legislature until the two bills go through, and not to stand for a compromise.

"There is every reason to believe," said Senator Tinkham, "that the two bills before the Legislature will go through. As soon as the protected the stockholders of the West End railroad are holding out for more than 7 per cent dividend, but the Governor is firm in his resolve that 7 per cent. is enough, and I think that before long the stockholders will realize that 7 per cent. is enough.

"The people should keep their eyes on the Legislature and see that their wishes in regard to the measures are carried out. The bills as drawn should go through and they will if the right attention is paid to them.

"But it should not be forgotten that the Elevated railroad and the stockholders of the West End are powerful and have agents of various kinds at work in their interests."

FERBER AGAIN DEFIES COURT

The hearing before United States Commissioner Hayes of Stillman Silas and Warren B. Wheeler, charged with using the mails to defraud in connection with the sale of North American Rubber stock, abruptly adjourned Friday on the refusal of Assistant District Attorney Ferber to produce a paper alleged to have been signed by Newell W. Blake, formerly vice president of the rubber company, was resumed and terminated with the contestants in the same tactical position.

Mr. Ferber again refused to deliver the paper to Attorney W. G. Thompson, counsel for the defense, although he held it in his hand as he addressed the court.

"I deny your right to command me to deliver this document," he told the court. "It is of such importance to this the state means contained that it must be regarded as privileges for the proper administration of justice. If I showed disrespect to the court I am willing to make amends. I am simply denying the court's right to order a privileged document into court."

Attorney Thompson said he had not time to look up the citations to support his request and Commissioner Hayes therefore adjourned the hearing until July 12, at which time the attorneys are to submit briefs on the question of the delivery of the paper.

FINDS LOST BOY, REFUSES $1,000

CONTUIT, July 1.—With a reward of $1,000 out for his discovery and a score of searchers scouring the sea to win the money, twenty-year-old Kenneth Linn of Chicago was found sleeping calmly in the Lowell bungalow at Popper-Nest Heights to-day.

The young man had been missing since late last night, disappearing shortly after reaching this town with his widowed mother and a nurse, from Florida yesterday. An invalid and greatly fatigued after his long journey from the South, it was feared that he had taken his own life by drowning, as he was fully clothed and headed for the open sea when last seen by the nurse.

Found Asleep in Bungalow.

Orrin Nickerson, a local fisherman who was out with the searchers, made the discovery that led to the young man's recapture when he chanced to notice that a window was open in the Lowell bungalow, a full mile away from the cottage where the Linns were staying. But Nickerson refuses to accept the $1,000 reward offered by Mrs. Linn for news that would lead to his discovery.

"It's only a local incident," the stately boatman declared to a representative of the AMERICAN when congratulated over obtaining the big reward. "I couldn't think of taking $1,000 for helping to find a lost boy, especially when the boy was ill and his mother a widow. It wouldn't be neighborly."

When found by Mr. Nickerson young Linn was asleep, but it was easy to see that he had suffered from the exposure following his escapade of last night, when he ran away from his mother's cottage with only a nightshirt and a sweater to protect him from the chilly breezes that invariably sweep in from Vineyard Sound after sundown.

Declares He Was Tired.

He didn't seem able to account for the sudden freak that caused him to disappear. Neither could he give any clear account of his experience since running away from his mother's cottage.

"I was tired. Oh, so tired!" he exclaimed upon being awakened. "And I've had such a nice sleep. I'm sure I don't know why anyone worried about me."

INVALID WIFE SEEKS HUSBAND

Mrs. Robert A. Saunders, wife of the man who held up the cashier of a lumber company in West Thornton, N. H., has written the AMERICAN a letter expressing her longing to see him or to hear from him. For the baby's sake she begs him to send some word to her.

Mrs. Saunders' pathetic confession, sent to the Sunday AMERICAN and relating how she found out that he was doing a criminal act by the unsteadiness of prevailing habits, and how the new baby brought to the mother hundreds of expressions of sympathy and some material assistance. She is recovering her strength little by little, but the unsettled feeling that arises from her husband retards her recovery.

Her letter follows:

Editor AMERICAN:

I take the liberty of writing you to let you know that I appreciate what you have done for me. I should have written before but did not feel able to. I am much better now, but am not yet very strong.

Oh, if I only could hear from him, but I suppose he is afraid to do so. I would be so happy. If he was only with me again. I am sure for the baby's sake we would not have to live long this time.

Hoping that you will do all you can for us, I remain,

Respectfully yours,
MRS. SAUNDERS.

PAY-AS-YOU-ENTER CARS ARE RUNNING

"Pay as you enter" cars are now running on the Mattapan-Quincy street line of the Boston Elevated. The system has caused some expected confusion.

"These cars are an experiment," says J. Harris Whittemore of the Elevated, "and we have much confidence. If we find they are working well the possibility of converting our present stock of ordinary cars into one of the pay-as-you-enter type will be considered. If it is found possible and advisable, there is no doubt that the whole city will finally be put on this system. At present our plans do not reach so far. We have fifty cars ordered. About twenty of them are now running on the Mattapan line. By the Fame of the Quincy-Milton street line will be equipped, and sometime during the Summer we will start this type of cars on the line from Medford to Sullivan square via Winter Hill.

TENANT CAN BREAK LEASE OF A NOISY FLAT, RULES JUDGE

Good news for all the Mr. Dingbats and Mrs. Dingbats here, too, in Boston, comes from New York. There is hope for Boston tenants in the decision of the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court, in New York, that a tenant who leases an apartment on a written contract for a certain period and leaves before the lease is up is justified in doing so if the landlord takes no action when the tenant complains that certain of his neighbors are noisy and his wife had been insulted by them while in the apartment house elevator. The Court decided that the neighbors complained of were maintaining a common nuisance which the landlord could abate and that his failure to do so justified the defendant in vacating the premises.

MONDAY

Linen Suits
Linen Dresses

One of the Fifth Avenue, New York, manufacturers of exceedingly fine Suits and Dresses, each year on the first of July closes out every garment made from linen, batiste and other suiting fabrics remaining in his stock, including garments even in the process of manufacturing. All cannot be delivered at once, and the portion of the purchase that will be offered on Monday consists of about One Hundred Suits and Dresses of the less expensive character—they are made from fine French linen or Irish linen and there is a large variety of styles, both in the suits and in the dresses.

Conservatively estimated, the values at which these Suits and Dresses were made to sell would be 18.00, 20.00, 25.00 to 35.00.

All the Suits and all the Dresses are priced at 10.00 and 12.50

Bordure Foulard Dresses

A maker of fine Foulard Silks having had countermands on four or five of his most beautiful bordered foulard designs owing to late delivery, closed them out to a maker of dresses, who made them up in about six simple but exceedingly effective styles. Most of them are in shades of blue, navy and black.

10.

A month ago they would have sold for 20.00 to 30.00 each.

Nearly 4000 Pieces

Neckwear Samples

Two of the highest class manufacturers of Neckwear in New York City closed out their entire sample line to Chandler & Co at Half Price—they are the makers of neckwear who duplicate exclusively Paris models—who use the finest of lawns, batistes and linens, with the daintiest of imitation and real laces, and exclusive hand embroideries. All the models of last month are included and several lots of surplus stock.

Neckwear was never more beautiful than this season, and these are the two most beautiful lines manufactured.

OMAN DIES BY A BULLET

Despondent because of ill-health, Mrs. anie Frye, fifty-two years old, who for n ber of years conducted a lodging house No. 42 Worcester square, committed sui- de in her room by shooting herself in the breast. She was found lying uncon- cious on the floor, and was rushed to the y Hospital, where she died half an hour er arriving there. The body was taken the City Hospital Morgue. She left a e saying she intended to end her life. rs. Frye was a widow and so far as known her only surviving relatives a sister and a cousin. She had been ll health ever since she underwent eration at the City Hospital last ummer. The woman complained of her ent repeatedly and finally concluded her case was incurable. This prayed on her mind.

Shot Awakens Lodgers.

According to persons living in the house, Mrs. Frye was apparently in good spirits when she went to her room. She was heard pacing the floor of her room, however, until it is supposed she sat down and wrote the note saying she had taken her life, and left the missive on the table.

A few minutes later, Miss Edith Stafford, a lodger, who occupied a room across the hallway, was awakened by the sound of a shot and leaped out of bed just as Mrs. Frye with the revolver in her right hand staggered across the hallway into Miss Stafford's room and gasped: "I've killed myself." She then stumbled back to her own room and after placing the revolver on the table beside the note, fell to the floor unconscious.

Several other lodgers, awakened by the shot, came rushing down stairs. Mrs. Frye's cousin was notified, and a doctor and police were summoned. When the doctor arrived Mrs. Frye was failing fast and ordered her removed to the hospital.

Operation in Vain.

When she arrived at the hospital it was found the bullet had penetrated her left breast just over the heart, passing through the left lung, and imbedded itself in the tissues of the back. She was placed on the operating table, but lived only half an hour.

Mrs. Frye's husband died two years ago, and since that time she conducted the lodging house alone. She has a sister, Mrs. Adah Fuller, living in Rockland, Me., who will take charge of the body.

ONTINUE CASE OF BALL-PLAYING LAD

Jimmy Conway, the fourteen-year-old South Boston boy charged with playing ball on a South Boston street, was to have been arried before Judge Fallon in the juvenile court in that district to-day, but the case was continued for a week because Attorney James H. Vahey, who represents the boy, could not appear owing to the illness of his wife. Young Conway spent a night in jail after his arrest because he could not furnish bail. He is now out on bail. Andrew Conor was also in court to-day for playing ball, and his case also continued.

0,000 CLUB FIRE IN BURLINGTON, VT.

BURLINGTON, Vt., July 1.—Because there was a dead calm over Lake Champlain early to-day, Burlington was saved from a disastrous fire. Fire destroyed the Lake Champlain yacht clubhouse, tenanted by a wealthy New York Summer people, and would have gone through the big humber and district adjoining had there been even a slight breeze stirring.

ALLS WHILE GOING TO MEET ATWOOD

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., July 1.—Setting out in a home-made aeroplane to welcome Harry Atwood on his arrival from New London to-day, Dr. Charles Walden, a New York amateur aviator, met with a fatal disaster. His motor stopped while he was 150 feet in the air and the aeroplane dropped like a piece of lead. It struck a tree and Walden escaped without serious injuries, though the machine was wrecked.

Jack Barrymore and His Wife

Suit in New York reveals attempts made to kill the romance of stage favorite often seen in Boston and Miss Katherine Corri Harris.

REVEAL SECRET OF BARRYMORES

NEW YORK, July 1.—Articulation of the family skeleton of Sidney Harris and his wife, daughter of Mrs. Kathryn W. Brady, widow of Supreme Court Justice John R. Brady, and sister of Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman, was effected by the clearing up of the mystery of Mrs. Harris's acceptance of and then repudiation of Jack Barrymore as a prospective son-in-law.

It was learned that Mrs. Harris looked with favor upon the suit of the young actor for the hand of her daughter, Katherine Corri Harris, until threatened with a withdrawal of the allowance of $250 a month which had been voluntarily given her by Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman when she divorced Harris.

Mrs. Harris then assured her wealthy sister she was doing all in her power to fling the budding romance. Secretly, however, she was encouraging the young actor, and when Mrs. Harriman discovered this she promptly cut off her sister's allowance.

It was in February, 1910, Mr. Harris said that his daughter was introduced to Barrymore. When he learned of the affair he consulted his divorced wife, and decided to send the girl away, who then was only seventeen years old, to Paris. This was done.

"In spite of this my wife and my mother-in-law," Mrs. Brady, encouraged Barrymore and attempted to induce Katherine to leave Paris and marry him," said Mr. Harris. He added that he went to Paris in July, and that Mrs. Harris, who was in London, crossed the channel secretly, met Miss Katherine and sailed with her for New York, July 15.

As soon as he learned of the departure of Mrs. Harris and his daughter, Mr. Harris followed. He arrived in New York August 2, 1910, and was astonished to find the papers full of the approaching marriage of Barrymore and Miss Harris. Harris learned the affair had gone too far and there was no way of stopping the marriage.

In the meantime Mrs. Harriman, who was in Newport, learned of the contemplated match. She wired and wrote her disapproval to Mrs. Harris and threatened to immediately withdraw the latter's allowance.

KISSLESS BRIDE ASKS JURY TRIAL

NEW YORK, July 1.—Mrs. Edith Russell Gambier, "the kissless bride" of Edward Victor Gambier, the wealthy banker, asked Justice Pendleton in the Supreme Court through her counsel, former Judge Van Wyck, for a jury trial of Gambier's suit for annulment.

Congressman Martin Littleton, counsel for Gambier, opposed this, and Justice Pendleton will send the case back to the general calendar and allow the question to be threshed out later.

Regarding his decision in Mrs. Gambier's suit for separation on grounds of desertion, testimony in which was concluded yesterday, Justice Pendleton said he would give counsel ten days to submit briefs. In the mean time Mrs. Gambier will continue to draw $250 a month allimony.

GROCER FIGHTS TIPS TO NEWPORT SERVANTS

NEWPORT, R. I., July 1.—F. P. Garretson, former Mayor of Newport, and now a grocer, has renewed the campaign which he started two years ago to break up the practice of giving commissions to the servants of cottagers to hold their trade. All Newport is discussing Mr. Garretson's advertisements in the local newspapers. Under the heading, "No Commission Given to Servants," he recites all the evils of the practice. It is often necessary, he says, for a tradesman to meet the demand of a servant for a box of cigars or a load of groceries for himself to hold his employer's trade.

CITY CONCERT AIRS CLASSICAL

Music lovers of Boston will get a real treat to-morrow afternoon when the Summer season of popular concerts under the direction of the Boston Music Commission opens with a concert on the Common. The program will be given by the Municipal band of Boston, of which Dionisio C. Cerriola, a musician of marked ability, is the leader.

The selections will be entirely from the classic composers, and the open air feature will give it an added attraction for thousands of Boston people. The concert lasts from 3:30 until 5:30 o'clock.

The musical experts are not the only ones who will be pleased with the two hours of harmony. Everybody likes good music played by a good band. Director Cerriola has obtained well trained men for his organization. The composers are among the world's greatest. Some of those represented on the program are Tschaikowsky, the Russian composer, and Verdi, Ponchielli and Mascagni among the Italians.

The program was arranged by Director Cerriola with Walter L. Finigan, secretary to the Boston Music Commission, which has charge of the Summer concerts.

Concerts will be given on the Common every Sunday afternoon, after to-morrow, through the Summer. On week nights concerts are given at the public playgrounds and in the parks and public squares. All the selections played are from the classic composers. For encores the selections are usually taken from the lighter operas.

The concerts this Summer will mean an expenditure of about $20,000 by the city. Concerning the plans for this season, Secretary Finigan had this to say to-day:

"This summer the programs will be better than ever. The people who come to the concerts now demand the very best music. Years ago we were obliged to force the more serious selections. The public clamored for light stuff. Now if we use lighter music at all, it is for encores, and even these are selected from the most popular light operas.

"One of the pioneers in the movement to give the people of Boston better music was Emil Mollenhauer, who was band leader for several seasons, but he has not been with the band for two years. Our new leader, Mr. Cerriola, will have charge of the band this Summer and better programs than ever are expected."

The program for to-morrow afternoon follows:

Swedish Coronation march.....Svendsen
Overture, "Maximilian Robespierre".....Litolf
Grand Imps from "Aida," second act.....Verdi
Cornet solo—"Whirling Polka".....Levy
Mr. H. B. Brereton.

HEROIC RESCUE OF FISHERMEN IN GALE

Seven fishermen were rescued in the sea of Japan by the British steamship Matopo, Captain Dormand, which has arrived from the far East. During a terrific gale officers of the steamship sighted a small boat with the men lying almost dead in its bottom. Much difficulty was experienced in effecting the rescue. The Japanese government, in recognition of the heroic action on the part of the officers and crew of the Matopo, will present Captain Dormand a set of solid silver cups. The castaways were landed at Kuchinotsu.

BILL TO CURB LOAN SHARKS

The sweeping Tinkham-Cavanagh anti-loan-shark bill prepared by the Committee on Banks and Banking, following the graphic expose of loan-shark evils by the Sunday AMERICAN, has been completed to the smallest detail. It is now before the House, awaiting its second reading.

This measure is designed to do away with the fearful conditions shown to exist as a result of the small-loan brokers merciless persecution of the poor, in the Sunday AMERICAN'S great exclusive story. It is presented by the AMERICAN to-day for the first time, that the general public may have an opportunity to study its provisions carefully.

Boston's merchants, manufacturers, churches, labor organizations, and the powerful Chamber of Commerce all have united in the anti-loan-shark fight taken up by the AMERICAN. Without exception they are all determined to protect the honest but needy poor from further exploitation by the ruthless money-lenders.

This is the answer to that the Committee on Banks and Banking believes will bring about the desired result.

AN ACT TO PROVIDE FOR THE REGULATION OF THE BUSINESS OF SMALL LOANS.

SECTION 1—There is hereby established the office of Supervisor of Loan Agencies. The term of office shall be for three years, and the Governor shall be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council. His salary shall be twenty-five hundred dollars a year. He shall be furnished with an office in the State House or elsewhere, and shall be allowed such sums for necessary expenses and for clerical assistants as may be approved by the Governor and Council. He shall report to the Governor and Council, on or before the fifteenth day of January current to the Secretary of this Commonwealth for the calendar year a report of his doings, with such suggestions and recommendations as he deems necessary.

SECTION 2—It shall be the duty of the district Police and the police of the cities and towns of the Commonwealth to carry out the directions of said Supervisor relative to the provisions of this Act, and of any regulations made hereunder by him.

SECTION 3—No person, association, corporation or partnership shall directly or indirectly engage in or transact the business of making small loans of three hundred dollars ($300) or less where the amount to be paid on such loans, for interest and expense together for such loans, exceeds an amount equivalent to twelve per cent (12 per cent) per annum, without first obtaining a license for the carrying on of such business in the city or town in which the business is to be transacted. Such license may be granted to any person, association, corporation or partnership.

SECTION 4—The Supervisor shall from time to time, establish regulations with reference to the granting of licenses to persons, associations, to be the lenders so licensed and loan companies and associations established or existing under this law. He shall cause personally or by such assistants as he may appoint, examinations to be made of the affairs, business and condition of each licensee, and may require such information, documents and reports from the lenders, books and papers, and shall ascertain the conditions of business and the manner in which they have complied with the provisions of law and the regulations established by the Supervisor, and may, for the purpose of such examination, administer oaths. The examination of each such business to be made by the Supervisor or his assistants shall be made at the cost of such examination shall be paid by the person or corporation subject to such examination.

Make Annual Return.

SECTION 5—All persons under his supervision shall annually on the last day of December of each year make a return to the Supervisor in the form of a trial balance of their books at the close of business on that day, or of a consolidated balance from the several offices, showing the different kinds of liabilities and assets of the business and such other pertinent information as may be required by the Supervisor. Such return shall be made in a blank form to be furnished by the Supervisor. Such returns of so much as the Supervisor may deem necessary shall be forwarded with the Supervisor to the Legislature.

SECTION 6—The Supervisor may summon the officers or the responsible managers of any of such persons or corporations, and may require their attendance at such time and place as he may designate, to examine into the business, transactions and conditions of such persons. Whoever, without sufficient excuse, neglects to appear and testify when so required, or obstructs the Supervisor or his representatives in the performance of their duties, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars or by imprisonment of not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SECTION 7—The Supervisor shall establish the rate of interest to be charged by persons who shall have due regard to the amount of the loan, the character of the security, the risk of the loan, and the necessary expense incurred, but shall not exceed three per cent. (3%) per month, and no charges or fees shall be made for any loan except as herein provided for a greater rate of interest than that fixed by the Supervisor.

License Fee $100.

SECTION 8—Licenses granted by the Supervisor shall be for a period of one year from the first day of October, provided, however, that licenses granted between August 1st, and September 30th, shall be for the period from the date of issue to the first day of September, 1912. Such license shall plainly state the name of the licensee, and the place or places where the business is to be conducted, and shall be posted in a conspicuous place in the office where the business is transacted.

SECTION 9—The fee for all licenses granted under this Act shall be one hundred dollars to exceed one hundred dollars ($100). If the licensee desires to carry on his business more than one place, he shall procure a license for each place where the business is to be conducted.

SECTION 10—Any person, partnership, association or corporation who violates the provisions of this Act or of the regulations made by the Supervisor, shall be subject to a fine of not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500), and his license may be suspended or revoked by the Supervisor. Any loan upon which a greater rate of interest or expense is charged and collected than is allowed by this Act or the regulations of the Supervisor may be declared void by the Supreme or Superior Court in Equity upon petition by the person to whom such loan was made.

SECTION 11—Such license shall not be granted until the applicant shall have filed with the Supervisor of Loan Agents a statement under oath, showing the name or a corporation that is the by the president or agent thereof in charge of such business is to be carried on, the name and the principal office or place of business where the same and the principal office or place of business where the business is to be conducted, and if a corporation, under the laws of which it is organized, and the name and place address of each of the officers and the agent or other officer having charge of its business within this Commonwealth, and unless exempted by the Supervisor of Loan Agencies has been appointed a person satisfactory to the Supervisor to be the agent of such licensee upon whom all notices and processes may be served in actions or proceedings arising under the provisions of this Act, and such statement shall also contain such applicant, or in case a change occurs in the name or address of a licensee agent, a statement of such change, and the said of any licensed corporation or in the place where the business is carried on or the membership of any partnership licensed a true list of the officers after such change, given to in the manner required above in the case of the original statement. Such statement shall be kept by the Supervisor of Loan Agencies for any time.

Bond is Required.

SECTION 12—Such license shall not be issued until the licensee gives to the Treasurer and Receiver General of the Commonwealth a bond in a penal sum not exceeding twenty thousand dollars, to be executed by the licensee and a surety company approved by the Supervisor, conditioned for the faithful performance by the licensee of the duties and requirements imposed by this Act, and the rules and regulations made by the Supervisor, and judgment rendered against the licensee for which the said bond is given may be made under the provisions of this Act, but no suit at law or in equity shall be commenced against said sureties on any such bond after thirty days after judgment against licensee. If in any case any suit or in equity against such licensee under the provisions of this Act it appears that the amount due to the plaintiff or plaintiffs in such suit or suits, including the costs of the suit or suits, is in excess of the discharge therein of the licensee, the Court may, at any time before the entry of a special judgment or decree for the Plaintiff for the amount of his debt damages and costs, or for such other relief as may be granted to, and before the distribution of the proceeds of the bond to such special judgment or decree, and with such decree. Whoever is aggrieved by a breach of the condition of such bond may sue thereon in his own name and in his own behalf, but in the name of the obligee, and if judgment shall be entered for the defendant for costs, execution therefor shall issue against the person who brought the suit, who shall be brought as to save the Plaintiff harmless, but no suit shall be brought on any bond like proceedings shall be had as in a suit by a creditor on an administration bond. The Supervisor may, at any time, require any licensee to file an additional bond of like nature and with like effect, and may give full information as to the judgments recovered or suits pending, on his bond. Upon the filing of such bond the license shall be delivered to the licensee.

SECTION 13—If a greater rate of interest or expenses or charges than is allowed under the provision of this Act has been paid on any loan on which this Act is applicable, the person who, or whose estate, has paid such excess may, by an action of contract, or suit in equity, recover back the excess unlawfully collected or expenses with twice the legal cost and interest thereon, if the same has been collected within one year after the payment thereof.

SECTION 14—If a loan to which the provisions of this Act apply is secured by a mortgage or pledge of personal property, or by an assignment of wages, the mortgage or assignment or the pledge receipt or the assignment released or delivered to the borrower at the time the loan is paid, but the execution of such release and such payment or tender may be made by the debtor, or any person duly authorized by him, or any person having an interest in the property mortgaged or pledged or in the wages assigned, and every refusal to redeem property required to be delivered to the debtor upon payment or tender, and every attempt to charge or collect any charge for the same after payment of the debt secured thereby or on the order of the debtor, shall be a forfeiture as aforesaid shall be liable in action of tort to the borrower for all damages sustained thereby.

Promises for Payment.

SECTION 15—A mortgage or pledge of personal property or assignment of wages to which the provisions of this act applies shall not be valid unless it states with substantial accuracy the actual amount of the loan, the time when the loan is made, the rate of interest to be paid on the loan, the number of payments to be made, the amount of each payment, a provision that the mortgage may be paid in the manner provided in Section 14 of Chapter 255 of the Revised Laws, and the time and place of any sale to be made in foreclosure proceedings and a statement of the expenses which may be charged in case of default. Whoever violates the provisions of Section 4 and 5 of Chapter 255 of the Revised Laws shall not be valid in any case unless it expressly states where such notice is to be recorded, and that the right of redemption after foreclosed sixty (60) days after such recording. At the time of the making of any loan to which this Act applies, the lender thereof shall forthwith, on demand, deliver to the borrower a statement signed by the mortgagee or any person interested in the mortgage, showing the time the loan was

IRL WITNESS FOR LORIMER

WASHINGTON, July 1.—For the first time since the Lorimer investigation began a woman was called to the witness stand today. She was Miss Frances Carroll, telephone operator in the office of the Illinois Lumber Company of Chicago.

Miss Carroll will go down in the records of the investigation as a woman with a remarkable memory. She assumed to give within the two conversations which Illnes is said to have had over the long distance telephone, on the day Lorimer was elected, with Governor Deneen and with Lorimer.

She repeated word for word what each one said, but she could not recall any other conversation which she heard on that day. Miss Carroll appeared to be perfectly thirty years of age, with a pleasing address. She wore a blue shirt waist and black hat with white lace trimmings, blue glasses and tie. The witness produced her record book for May, 1909.

The witness said she heard Illnes say: "Hello, Governor; hello, Governor?" This is Illnes. I have just returned from Washington. I have a message from the President through Senator Aldrich to see you as soon as possible and to have you do all you can to aid the election of Mr. Lorimer.

In Doubt About Voice.

"At first the Governor didn't seem to recognize Mr. Illnes's voice," said Miss Carroll, "and Mr. Illnes said he would call Mr. Reynolds, who was at the Continental Bank and have himself (Illnes) identified. Then the Governor said he recognized Mr. Illnes's voice. Governor Deneen said he would see Mr. Lorimer as soon as possible."

A few minutes later, Miss Carroll said, Illnes called her from the Continental Bank and asked her to get Lorimer in Springfield. Illnes then went to Cook's room in the Grand Pacific Hotel, and when she got Lorimer she called Illnes Cook's room. A man whose voice she did not know answered, and she asked if Mr. Illnes was there. Illnes came to the telephone and the witness continued: "I said, 'Mr. Illnes, here is Mr. Lorimer.' Mr. Illnes said, 'Is that you Mr. Lorimer?' I have just talked with the Governor and he has promised to assist you.'

"Mr. Lorimer said 'I have already seen the governor.' Mr. Illnes said: 'Do all you can and leave nothing undone and I will come down this afternoon.'" Mr. Lorimer said: 'Don't think you can arrive to-day in time to do any good. I will be you or telephone you later.'"

Remembered Talk Perfectly.

Miss Carroll said she remembered the conversation so accurately because it was the first time she had ever called Governor Deneen, and also because she was acquainted with Lorimer and his family, was interested in his case and paid attention to it.

She listened to the conversation, she said, in order that she might check up the time, which it was concluded and enter the proper charge.

Witness could not narrate any other conversation she had heard over the phone during the ten years she had been with the company.

"Was there any statement by Mr. Illnes," asked Judge Farrar, who conducted the examination, "in his conversation with Governor Deneen or Mr. Lorimer, to the effect that he would come down and bring all the money necessary?"

"No, sir."

Emma Eames, Noted Prima Donna, and Her $100,000 Husband-to-Be

MME. EMMA EAMES AND EMILIO DE GOGORZA.

It is whispered in Paris, where the great opera singers are to wed, that $100,000 was, in effect, the consideration for which the wife of Emilio de Gogorza gave a quitclaim release on the affections of the famous baritone.

EAMES TO WED AND SING HERE

The remarkable romance of Emma Eames, opera prima donna, and Emilio de Gogorza, famous baritone, is to culminate in Paris within a few days. Banns for the marriage have just been published here, according to cablegrams received in this city. It is also announced by cable that Mme. Eames and Signor de Gogorza will come to Boston in order to permit the diva to fulfill her contracts here.

Emma Eames obtained a divorce from Julian Story, the artist, several years ago and in March, 1909, Mme. de Gogorza filed in New York a suit for a limited separation and against Eames a suit for absolution. It followed a concert tour in which de Gogorza and Mme. Eames had been booked together.

But in Mme De Gogorza's action there was no hint of anything reprehensible on

M'ISAAC TELLS OF TOUR ABROAD

Fred J. Melsaac, the Sunday AMERICAN'S special representative who is making the big tour of Europe with the members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, wrote a delightfully interesting story of the trip across the ocean of the party on the Carmania. This story reached the AMERICAN office to-day and will be one of the splendid exclusive features of to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Mr. McIsaac is the only representative of a Boston newspaper with the touring party of business men. His letters will be of great value to the people at home, telling just what the Boston and other business men from this country find out abroad, where extensive plans have been made for their entertainment.

The initial letter of Mr. McIsaac is filled with that kind of personality that makes the home reader one of the traveling party. It is filled with lively incidents and is as refreshing as the salt sea over which the voyagers sailed.

Get started right in following the Chamber of Commerce men by reading Mr. McIsaac's first letter in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

STATE AUDITOR TURNER BURIED

Funeral service for State Auditor Henry E. Turner were held at his residence, No. 37 Washington street, Malden, and were attended by many persons prominent in public life. There was no music and the services were conducted by Rev. William H. Dewey, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in that city. Relatives of the deceased official were the pallbearers. Interment was in the family lot in Woodlawn Cemetery.

The Massachusetts Legislature was represented by a delegation of six Senators and fifteen Representatives.

Eames Issued Statement.

Mme. De Gogorza sought alimony of $250 a week. She had become such a clog to the soulfights of her husband, she testified, that he offered her ample provision if she would only seek an absolute divorce. This she consistently refused to do, for she considered family ties sacred. Mme. Eames, and declared that she would not accept such a decree for the purpose of legal ties between the prima donna and her husband.

Eames impetuously proclaimed her own innocence of any wrong intent or act and insisted a separation statement be issued to save appearances.

"It is awful that the name of a woman can be drawn into such a scandal and she can have no way of ending this wrong. It is all false to Signor de Gogorza and myself. Why, they say we were planning to go to Europe together. This is outrageous preposterous. But what can I do? If I skulked from the housetops I could not make them believe that I am blameless.

"To say that I am implicated in the family troubles of Signor de Gogorza is the blackest lie that ever passed the devil's lips."

At this time Mme. Eames and Signor de Gogorza were on tour together. They appeared in Symphony Hall and were acclaimed with the greatest fervor, the regal prima donna receiving ovation after the diva winning the public to her side of the case.

Couple Sped to Paris.

Soon afterward the De Gogorza case was withdrawn from the courts. It was said at that time that the baritone had made an amicable settlement with his wife. Eames went to Europe and De Gogorza followed. In London Emilio de Gogorza was met at the Euston station by a tall and beautiful woman. There was an embrace that drew the attention of porters and their lips met in a kiss that outlasted the Carmen kiss, the Merry Widow kiss or even the osculatory triumph of Natoma. Bystanders recognized the woman as Mme. Eames.

In Paris the couple sped and reunited more inconspicuously, going about little frequented circles. Soon it became known that De Gogorza had applied for a divorce. It was rumored that he would sue for divorce in the courts of Paris. But no confirmation of this plan could be obtained. The deserted wife in New York disclaimed all knowledge of any such suit.

Next Mme. Eames purchased for $100,000 a mansion in the Bois de Boulogne. Again it was rumored that the marriage was imminent. But both singers denied it.

"Quit Claim" on Affections.

Finally, Mme. de Gogorza, in New York, authorized her legal agents, Silver and Bedell to discuss the case exactly to insist that no notice had come to her of any divorce decree contemplated or obtained by her husband. But it was whispered that the prima donna had made arrangements that were perfectly satisfactory to the abandoned wife. One hundred thousand dollars was named as the price at which she had bought a quit claim to the affections of the baritone.

In February of the present year it became an open secret that the elongated mansion in the Bois de Boulogne was to be the honeymoon nest of the singers. Every obstacle to their union had been cleared away and with a brief time announcement was made of their engagement.

Danger Signals in the Kindergarten Age

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

DID you ever imagine that there could be any danger to your little son or daughter in the play and study of a kindergarten? Danger to his eyesight, his finely organized nervous system, his rapidly developing mind?

Dr. Hutchinson, in this most entertaining article, shows you plainly the signals of some very real dangers.

He tells you, too, how to recognize the often misunderstood safety signals of this age—signals which really should be a cause of happiness instead of worry to your mother's heart.

Think of your little tots—you fathers—remember what effect this kindergarten age is going to have on all their lives to come, and get Dr. Hutchinson's article. Take a copy home to your wife and read it aloud to her tonight.

SAY CROWDS RETURN FROM COLLEGE RACE

Tired, but happy, crowds of Harvard enthusiasts returned to Boston last evening after special trains. Almost everyone got off in the Back Bay, where the scene, as specials after special pulled into the station, was one of color and animation that contrasted for the lack of the customary cheering.

The first heavy parlor car train arrived at Back Bay Station at 6:30, followed in two minutes by a special express, made up of ten day coaches. Under ordinary circumstances the "Saints" Limited from New London to New York is due at Back Bay at 7:30, but last night it was twenty minutes behind the first section, of the big four special, which contained the Harvard party, to arrive fifteen minutes ahead of it. At 10:30 the second section arrived. In this special the class of '93 and a number of private parties had their own cars. It was almost 11:30 the third and last section pulled into the station.

Special cars were filled by several clubs of Harvard men. Some of the Dexter party, the Russell club, the Fly club of Lawrence and several Boston parties. It was particularly quiet throng despite the victory. There was also no overwhelming thirst most of the crew showed. It thought there was little to be done in the way of celebrating that night. Instead of laughing and songs of college days.

Strong Elected Captain.

At a meeting of the Harvard crew at the New London at Red Top, immediately after the race, Alexander Strong, '12, of New York, was unanimously elected captain of the Harvard crew for the year 1913. Strong prepared for college at St. Mark's, where he was prominent in athletics. He was on his freshman crew and played football on his freshman football team. He rowed on the varsity for the past three years at No. 6 and has had the privilege of rowing Yale defeated both times. Strong is very popular with his classmates and has a host of friends in college. He is a member of the following clubs: Institute of 1913, D. K. E., Gold House, Phoenix and Varsity Pudding clubs.

Strong is twenty-one years old, six feet three inches in his socks, tall for a coxswain, being the biggest man on the crew.

Yale Selects Romeyn.

The Yale crew elected Radcliffe Romeyn, captain of 1912 in a meeting in the crew quarters immediately after the race. Romeyn comes from New Jersey and prepared for Yale at the Peddie School. He was a member of the freshman squad last year, although he failed to make the regular eight. He is a member of the Junior class of the Sheffield Scientific School. He is twenty-one years old, weighs 174 pounds and is six feet two inches in height.

Coach Harvard's coach, says of the Yale crew: "I know we would win, but not by much margin. The eight rowed beautifully all the way through and every man gave a good account of himself. Of course I am glad. My attention has been called upon the eight-oared race, and we got it.

Captain Cutler says: "Harvard has since more demonstrated its superiority over Yale in rowing in a most conclusive manner. I have felt confident of winning all along but believed the Yale crew would give us a tougher battle. Much credit is due Coach Wray for developing this crew in the manner he has. Every man in the squad throughout the season has given me his best support, and that is what counts."

Captain Frost Silent.

Captain Frost of the Yale crew said: "The race was rowed and was won by Harvard in its merits. I do not care to go into details. All of our men are in first-rate condition and trying to get ready for another season."

As was to be expected, every one of the eight men that pulled an oar in the Harvard shell last evening, had a warm reception at the Harvard quarters, being when it was found that Coxswain Cole had lost three pounds. Alden, when he pulled just before the race, tipped the scales at 111 pounds, but upon returning only weighed 108.

DINEEN SAYS YOUNG WILL LAST FOREVER

Bill Dineen, the umpire and veteran pitcher, says Cy Young's arm will last forever.

"It will be good until his legs give out. There's no reason to believe his legs won't carry him until he's fifty, and I honestly believe he'll be pitching and winning at that age," said Dineen.

"Old Cy has been called lucky for three or four years, but he isn't lucky. He has got about the hardest left hand arm of any pitcher in the league, especially last season. He has more speed and as good curve as four-fifths of the pitchers and keeps the batters fooled most of the time.

"While I have often marvelled at Cy's natural ability, I have marvelled more frequently at his great generalship. He has almost uncanny knowledge of what the batter thinks he will attempt. I have often said to myself, 'Well, one a fast ball,' he puts them all over a corner of the plate. I don't remember of ever seeing him put a ball over the middle of the pan."

MORRIS NOT IN FLYNN'S CLASS

A tender sacrifice is to be offered up in behalf of pugilistic advancement in the not distant future. That is, if the honest opinion of at least 99 per cent. of the followers of the world of Fistiana in New United States of America. The event was originally scheduled to take place on the Fourth of July, but on account of the inability of the promoters to get a suitable place for the enactment of the affair it will probably be put over until the latter part of the month. The sacrifice bears the name of Carl Morris and calls Sapulpa, Oklahoma, home. The sacrificer is none other than our old friend and college chum, Mr. James Flynn, who at one time held the position of fireman in the fair city of Pueblo.

Fight fans are not all cruel and heartless, however, and there are many who hope that Flynn will not jostle Morris too severely when they swap wallops within a 24-foot ring. But then they say a bank on such things with any degree of surety, especially when our old friend Mr. James Flynn is one part of the contract. If you don't believe this statement just ask Al Kaufman, mighty Californian and one-time "white man's hope." Al mixed up with Mr. Flynn one day not many months since, and was sent on a free excursion to a place known as Dreamland after ten rounds of rather spirited slam bang fighting.

As was stated above, Morris will celebrate his first appearance in the ring on Independence Day. During this short space of time he has met several fighters that never were, and several others that once were but who have passed into the great army of "has beens." Among this latter group was poor, poor old Martin Hart and Mike Schreck, fighters who were in their prime when Morris was wearing knickerbockers.

On the other hand, Flynn is a tried and experienced veteran of the prize ring. It is true that he is no champion, but he has always been able to give Uncle Sam up-hold his own when pitted up against the best men in his class.

Recently Flynn electrified the pugilistic world when he knocked out Al Kaufman, who at the time was negotiating for a match with Jack Johnson. In the battle Flynn displayed great ability as a fighter.

After witnessing the Kaufman-Flynn mill Morris remarked that he would defeat both men in the same ring on the same day. Maybe he can, but the fight fans think differently, for such is not their desire to be shown. If Morris can defeat Flynn he will be in line for a match with Johnson. But can he defeat Flynn? This is what fight fans would like to know. Time will tell, and that is the only way.

JOHN I. TAYLOR MAY SEE SACRAMENTOS

SACRAMENTO, July 1.—John I. Taylor, owner of the Red Sox in the American League, who owns a half interest in the Sacramento Coast League team, is willing to dispose of his interest to Sacramentans. Taylor has no advice Charles Graves, manager of the Sacramento team. Taylor is not desirous of selling his stock, but he is willing to sell providing local capitalists want to take complete charge of the team. There has been a sentiment here that the team would be better off if it were owned entirely by local people.

FANS FAVOR EARLIER GAMES

The movement started by the AMERICAN to have the games at both the Red Sox and Red Sox parks begin at an earlier hour is receiving the hearty support of baseball fans from all parts of New England.

In yesterday's editions the AMERICAN contained an article asking the fans to write out their opinion on the matter, and in this morning's mail a big package of letters were received, the majority of them in favor of starting the games earlier.

One of the main arguments advanced by the club owners in the past when they have been advocating the starting of games at a later hour has been that they would lose their State Street patrons, as the banks do not close until 3 o'clock.

By starting ten games at 3:15 or 3:30 they say that the "State Street patrons" will have plenty of time to get out to the ball grounds.

Some of the letters follow:

Baseball Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I wish to congratulate you in your efforts to have the games at an earlier hour. The club owners claim that they must start the games at 3 o'clock so that the bank clerks can get out in time to attend to their day's work when the shutters until 3 o'clock. But who ever heard of a bank clerk leaving his office before 3 o'clock? I myself have worked in a prominent banker's office for the past fifteen years, and have never yet been able to shake the dust of the office from my feet until well after 3 o'clock, and often when I had to get a trial balance I could not get away until 4 or 5 o'clock. And then again it is a majority that must be satisfied and not the bankers and brokers.

Yours truly,
MAGUIRE, Roxbury.

Baseball Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The AMERICAN was always first in urging anything for sports, and this latest movement started by the AMERICAN to have baseball games start at 3:15 instead of 3:30 is certainly the thing, and on those days when I went to a ball game in Boston I have had to be content with a cold supper that night. But if your campaign is successful I may have the pleasure and brown bread once more. Yours truly,

LYNN FAN.

Baseball Editor, AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I work in a baker and get home at one o'clock in the afternoon. If I go to the ball game I have to be back home by six o'clock, as my wife works in a restaurant at night and I have to make my own supper in her absence. As a result of my inability to get home on time my wife does not let me go to the game any more. I wish you would start the ball games earlier, so that I could get started at an earlier hour. I believe that there would be more to see the Red Sox or Rustlers and once again in the box to greet them.

Yours respectfully,
"Quincy Rooter."

OCEAN RACE STARTS.

Starting from New London this afternoon it is expected that seventeen yachts, schooners, sloops and yawls will take part in the ocean race from that port to Marblehead for the Edlu Cup, Class prizes.

In the entry list given out by the regatta committee of the club the owners of twelve schooners, three sloops and two yawls had signified their intention of racing around Cape Cod.

WANT HOLIDAY GAMES.

The Boston Y. M. C. A. team would like to arrange games away from home for the morning and afternoon of July 4. Telephone D. J. Aaron, Fort Hill 2009, before 11 a. m. to-day.

Owing to cancellation the Great Class fixtures are without a game for July 4. Telephone Main 5026 before noon.

BIG CROWDS AT HUDSON RACES

The largest crowd of people that ever witnessed an athletic event in Central Massachusetts is expected in Hudson the Fourth of July to see the first Middlesex handicap road race, which will be run in conjunction with the other sports scheduled for the celebration that day.

Up to date the management has received entries from some of the best amateurs in the State, including Piggott, Lally Kempton, Erikson, McBurnie, Fein, and many others well known to the followers of the running game. The prizes offered are as fine a collection as have ever been seen hereabouts.

The Boston runners entered will fing it to their advantage to have Boston on the train for Hudson which leaves North Station at 8:06, or on the Boston and Worcester, leaving Boston at 9 o'clock and changing at White's Corner for Hudson.

Entries close today with Lawrence P. Duffy, Hudson, Mass.

FIRE LADDIES READY FOR TRIP

The Boston fire fighters are in trim for the trip to New York on July 8 for the first game of the series with the firemen of that city. The Boston team has been playing for the past two months and have several games to their credit. The boys are playing in good style, the battery is good, and all hands expect a victory.

The players have been selected from all the firehouses in Boston and some of the best former high school and semi-professional players are on the list. McDermott and Moron will be the battery for the first game. McDermott beat the New York team here in Boston last season and he expects to win again.

A special excursion has been arranged to take the Boston rooters over to the game. Writer H. McNamara of No. 17 Edgeworth street, Charlestown, has charge of the trip, and arrangements can be made with him for the journey. A special rate of $12 has been set and that includes the train fare, hotel expenses and a banquet that has been arranged at a New York hotel. The party will leave Boston on Friday afternoon and return on the mid night train from New York Saturday.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

ARMORY A. A. MAY HAVE TO MOVE

How long the Armory A. A. will h meetings at its present clubhouse is question, because of the law which into effect today prohibiting the h ing of meetings over garages or pl where gasoline or other inflamm material is kept. Either the garage the club must go, according to the po and, as the garage owner has a lease of the building, it is not apt leave.

The club has a meeting billed for Thursday night and it figures that it be allowed to hold that by arranging no cars shall be in the garage while meeting is on.

It will be a blow to the fans if t are not allowed to see boxing in one the best appointed clubs of its kind the world. It cost over $25,000 to nish and arrange the club.

NEW YORK, July 1.—It takes a good deal to shock New York. The whole cluster of boroughs is still in a daze today over the doings out at the Polo Grounds yesterday. All the newspapers are out extras on the strength of it.

Even up to ten o'clock to-day the neighborhood of Broadway and Forty-second street was still taking it home and asking the owner of the next foot on the rail how in the world it ever happened. For the sake of the amazed populace over in Boston who may be skeptical about it yet, let it be repeated that it is on the level. The Rustlers really won a game and from the Giants at that. Well, well, as Arlie Latham would say. Did you ever hear the like of that?

They will try to do it again this afternoon and maybe they will get away with it. Every Giant on the team went to bed last night so bewildered that the organization may go to pieces today through sheer shock.

Hub Perdue having turned the trick, Tenney thinks Buck Weaver is right to trim McGraw's men and will send him to the firing line this afternoon when they fail to satisfy. McGraw is so sore over the unexpected walloping he may pitch Mathewson.

This goes to show the beautiful uncertainties of the national game and is a splendid illustration of the fact that the despised tail-enders in any league are some times likely to turn around and knock the wadding of the leaders. Therefore McGraw will take no more chances with the stragglers from Boston.

They certainly jumped on Wiltse and Drucke with their war bindgeons. Tenney gave a surprising show of returning form. He led in the drubbing served up to the two Giant pitchers. Hughes, Bentz and two-baggers were some of the assortment of waste Tenney had in his bat bag.

Kling, too, got back into his stride. His two-base hit in the third inning was good for two of the Rustler runs. It was in this inning that Tenney got in his double run. Four runs came over the pan for Boston then, and they were enough to win the game.

Both Rustlers and Giants hit for ten swats, but the Bostons had the better of the argument in the matter of hits good for extra bases. It was a bitter as well as an unlooked for licking to the Giants, for the Cubs dropped another game, the Cincinnati Reds hanging up the gloom sign over the Murphy camp.

Win or lose, the Rustlers will be the guests over Sunday. After they get through out at the Polo Grounds they will cross the East River for a friendly debate with Mr. Bill Dahlen's Dodgers. What's that? Dahlen friendly in Boston? Why? About as friendly as a Bowery barkeeper to a hobo with a plugged dime.

For best story of this event see the Sunday AMERICAN.

FOOTBALL MATCH AT ATHLETIC GAMES

Arrangements are made by the committee in charge of the games of the Golway Athletic Association, which will be held at Oak Island Grove, Revere, July 4, for a football match between the John Wade-Kelly team of Roxbury and the Hibernians of Malden. The committee, which consists of P. J. Murray, Joe Patten, Rev. Fr. Canley and John Reynolds, are elated at this feature. Other important events will be added to-day.

DONNELLY TO COACH MARYLAND AGGIES

WORCESTER, July 1.—Charley Donnelly of this city, a brother of Jim Donnelly, coach of the athletic teams at Howard College, Birmingham, Ala., has been named head coach of the Maryland Agricultural College eleven for this Fall. He coached a Washington, D. C., high school eleven last Fall.

Donnelly prepared for college at classical High school and played football for the W. H. S. elevens in 1903-4. He was quarterback on the star 1904 team and entered Holy Cross the next Fall, but quit after a short stay.

MATT WELLS IS FREAK FIGHTER

By ED W. SMITH.

CHICAGO, July 1.—You have heard of this fighter or that one outgrowing this class or that one and jumping into the next division above. Surely you've heard of you have. You remember how everybody marveled at the weight that members of the American boxing party took on during their trip to Australia, and the story about how Eddie ("Kid") Carter boxed in every one of the classes from feather to heavyweight in the course of a few years. Still familiar to you, all that stuff?

Well, did you ever hear of a boxer shrinking in weight so that he dropped two full classes? Of course you didn't, for it wouldn't be possible, you say, and have the lighter remain strong and able to fight. I never thought so either until Jimmy Dougherty told me a story the other night about Matt Wells, the English boxer, who is now in this country and looking for a match with Ad Wolgast, and others of lesser fame.

Calls Him a Wonder.

Jimmy came into the office with a far away look in his eye. He had something on his mind that was plain, and pretty soon he started to let it slide off.

"Do you know anything about this fellow Matt Wells?" he inquired. "To begin with, what does he weigh? You think he can do 135 pounds all right, eh?

"Well, if he can he's the wonder of the world. There are not two Matt Wells's are there? I don't understand it. Here's the mystery that I'm trying to solve.

"When Matt Wells was in the country before—The Hunt's speedy boy—in October, 1910—I fought him at the Fairmount Athletic club in New York. And you, I was a middleweight then, just the same as I am now, only I was perhaps four pounds lighter at that time. That's less than a year ago, too, mind you.

Wells Weighs 148 Pounds.

"Now, we didn't have any forfeits up for weights and we didn't agree to make any particular figure, but as I was the biggest man, I told Wells I would train faithfully and be as low as I could reach with safety. If he would do the same, he'd both kept our agreement and when it came time to scale he weighed 148 and I 151½. And he was in good shape, too, from the looks of him as well as my judging of the way he fought.

"Now, how in the world can he do 135 pounds in June, 1911, when he weighed 148 in good shape in October, 1910? I've been puzzling over that ever since he boxed and beat Freddie Welsh. I'd give something to know.

"As for the battle, itself, it went nine rounds and then ended when I caught him a hard left in the belly. Billy John was referee and didn't see it wasn't square. Wells claims a low hit and they called a couple of doctors, who said he was hurt, but many others say it was a positive foul and the punch knew that it was above the line. I know it was, for I was looking for no foul if it hadn't been. At any rate, that was the end of the match.

Believe Him a Good Man.

"Well, if he can make the weight he says he can and is strong, he ought to beat most of our American lightweights. He is wonderfully strong and a great boy, generally. He is a good hitter from both sides and one of the hardest men to hit that I ever boxed with. I found that an uppercut by the Cinchers found him unprepared. It may be that he is a bit weak in the defense of the head, but, of course, he may have overcome that since I met him.

"Howard is working nicely here for his battle next week in Memphis with Young Lougarey, the Philadelphia middleweight.

JEFFRIES BACK FROM HIS EUROPEAN TOUR

NEW YORK, July 1.—James J. Jeffries, back from Europe, stepped ashore from the Mauretania on his way home to Los Angeles. He looked so well that there was not courage enough among the entire aggregation of ship news reporters to ask him what he thought of one John Arthur Johnson. Jeffries said that as soon as he has taken a look at his business affairs he will make a hunting trip to Alaska. There were no friends to meet him, and other passengers said he kept very inconspicuous on the trip across.

UNCLE SAM MAY TAKE BROCKTON PLAYER

BROCKTON, July 1.—Unless authorities at the Boston Postoffice change their decision relative to an extension of a leave of absence to Walter Lonergen, one of the clerks, the Brockton New England League team will lose the services of the young Quincy player, the fastest man in the leagues on bases and the best fielding shortstop in the circuit. Lonergan secured a leave of absence until July 1, expecting to be able to have it extended, but has been unable to do so. Brockton business men plan to go to Boston in an effort to have Lonergan's leave extended.

CONNIE MACK IS ON THE WATCH

Though he is piloting the present world's champions and expects to be in another series next Fall, Connie Mack already is planning his series of deals and purchases for this Fall. He doesn't know of any spots that need strengthening, though his pitching staff doesn't entirely suit him. But he is going to look over some young sters and will decide early in August just which of the men that he now watching, and that practically belongs to him, though under contracts to other clubs, he desires to call in.

Mack has a line on more youngsters than any other manager in the country, and also has them planted in more leagues developing for him and still his property, though he may not have seen Eddon in near two years, since any other employer in major league ball.

Has Their Records.

He prefers the little red schoolhouse to the bush league, yet he is not insensible to any of ore found on the crossroads and minor league teams. Mr. Mack can go to the club office and consult his files and find out how many hits Harry Krause, pitcher, third baseman of the Shinglehimer, Kondolabster and Tappahannock's Stickly Ax Paper Company's team, at Laxville, Ala., made last week.

Connie also can tell what team is leading in the Sunday School league, Y. M. C. A. circuit, Neb., and knows that Pagan, the Seattle Methodists' star pitcher, has a great drop and might be worth a trial in 1912 or 1913.

It is a fact that Connie Mack has any number of youths planted who are hardly old enough to leave their knickies. Two years ago, at the age of sixteen, a boy in Philadelphia, schoolboy signed a contract to play with Mack. This fall Connie may send for the youngster before ordering this juvenile South with his team.

Plants For Four Years.

Peters, the California first baseman, who just joined the Athletics, has been planted by Mack for several years. For fear that he might be extradited on a charge of kidnapping, Mack only dare order the infant to report to fill this Spring.

Two boy youths planted for delivery in 1912, 1913, 1914 and 1915. He will call them as he needs them, but every year he has a big squad of candidates in reserve. Some calamity strikes his team, no manager in America looks as far down as the Athletics' master mind.

Remembering how wonderful when Mack took a team of nobodies in 1909 and finished second to Detroit. I'm that year tossed posies at Mack for getting a good team together so quickly, but they didn't know that Mack was planning for 1909 in 1901.

Fourth Games Wanted.

Mish Murray's baseball team is anxious to hear from any reliable semi-professional club away from home for the Fourth of July, offering reasonable inducements. We have defeated Dorchester, Roxbury, Stoughton, St. Joseph A. A. of Somerville, Stoneham, Souza Boston, Red Sox and others. Manager, Mish Murray, 201 Stephen st. Boston. Phone Back Bay, 1606 M.

The Winthrop K. of C. would like to arrange for either a double header or single game, July 4, to be played away from home. Guarantee wanted. Phone Henry Hamilton, Main 5530, Beach 81 Winthrop.

The Auburn A. A. of West Medford are without a game for July 4, p. m., and would like to arrange a game with any fast amateur teams for that date. W. P. O'Brien, 44 Sherman street, West Medford.

Owing to a cancellation of a game with the Happy Newsboys on July 4th, we are without a game and would like to hear from the strongest 16 or 17-year-old teams in the State. J. F. Manning, 35 Dorset street, Dorchester.

The Winter Hills, a semi-professional team of Somerville, are without a game for July 4, morning, owing to cancellation of James Hurley. Phone 2332-M, Somerville.

BUTLER MEETS ELMER COLLINS

Elmer Collins and Nat Butler, the veteran race follower will appear in the feature race at Revere Beach this evening. Both men have been training at the beach oval for the past week. This will be Butler's first appearance at the Revere cycle track for a considerable season, as he has been having things pretty much his own way.

Collins is sore over the several defeats which he has sustained at the hands of Butler and Lawrence and wants to beat Butler in such a decisive manner that there will be no doubt in the minds of the fans as to which of them is the better man behind the motors.

In addition to this special match event the management has also arranged a special match race between Floyd McFarland and Alfred Goodrette. The match between these two short trip riders will call for a half mile sprint, an unlimited pursuit race and a one mile open. Only one should be third heat be necessary.

The tandem event and a class B tandem handicap race will bring the meet to a close. For the afternoon meet, July 4, the management has secured Jimmy Lawrence, George Wiley, Nat Butler and Elmer Collins to appear in a one hour motor pace race. This race will start promptly at 2:30 p. m.

BOSTON GOLFER IS SECOND BEST

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 1.—Robert Simpson of Kenosha, Wis., winner of the Western open golf championship at the Hillcrest Country club, Chicago, 1907, holds the possession of the title. He defeated Thomas McNamara of Boston 2 up and 1 to play.

Despite the sweltering heat a big gallery followed the contestants on the Kent Country Club course and witnessed a match which was decided until the twenty-eighth hole was played. Time and time again the golfers in Boston man and three times during the afternoon McNamara missed short putts which would have given him an equalizer or victory.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE A KING,

BY KING PUGGY MULLANE THE FIRST AND HIGH CHIEF MOGUL OF THE ANCIENT ORDER OF THE CROSS-EYED SPUD.

I ONELY BEEN A KING FOR A DAY BUT I DONT LIKE IT VARY MUCH. I WILL BE GLAD WHEN WE BEGIN TO PLAY BASE BALL AGEN, BASE BALL IS MORE FUN THAN BEING A KING. ANY HOW MY MAMMA SAYS SHE DOES NOT WANT ME TO BE A KING. MY PAPA SAYS IF I KEEP ON BEING KING HE WILL SEND ME TO A REFORM SCHOOL. ANY HOW I AINT A WHOLE KING I AM ONLY KING AFTER SCHOOL. IN SCHOOL I AINT AND AT HOME I AINT TOO SO IT AINT SO GOOD AFTER ALL

THE ABOVE SPACE HAS BEEN RESERVED NEXT FOR — EMILY MORTON

Three cheers and a couple of whoops and a sneeze or two. The coronation fuss is all over. Queen Emily Morton was given a royal ride yesterday in her royal chariot, drawn by royal horses, through a royal arch, accompanied by all the royal plunk that could be gotten together for the occasion; and now the Yung Amerika Malgumated Nationals will settle down to base ball again.

Somebody in the crowd got a snicker from us by knocking the King's crown off with a tomato, and we laughed right out loud when the royal arch fell down and hit Brigadier-General "Hoob" Nelson (if the Broomstick Guards on the beam, but outside of that the whole show was not worth mentioning.

From King "Puggy" Mullane's special article, which we print to-day, it looks as if he is sick of his job already. We do not blame him. Although we have read quite a little history, being compelled to when we went to school, we never ran across anything about a king being captain of a baseball team.

Poor "Puggy" has only one out. He will either have to be a king and let the baseball business slide, or be a baseball player and let the king business slide. As his team is down on the books to play "Skinny" Risner's Starfish Giants in a championship series pretty soon, it is a pretty safe bet that he will can the crown.

Queen Emily Morton seems to be stuck on her job. After the procession in her honor yesterday she visited all the neighbors and bored them to death with detailed descriptions of the whole affair. We saw the beginning and the end of it. We were not more than twenty feet from the fellow who threw the tomato at King "Puggy" Mullane, and we helped Brigadier "Hoob" Nelson to his feet after he had been knocked down by the falling of the royal arch. We overheard Emily reciting her tale to Mrs. Swagenson, who lives next door but one to the Morton residence. If we did not know what she was talking about, we would have taken it for granted that she was describing one of Miss Jennie De Arc's old-fashioned triumphal blowouts. All her talk was about dress and all that rot. She barely mentioned the toppiness of your whole life, she cannot fail to give her consent also.

She hardly mentioned the royal arch falling down. Of course, all our tastes differ. If Emily wants to continue being a queen, all right, but we feel sorry for her.

We are certainly tickled to death that baseball commences again. No more coronations for us. They are too much trouble.

Medical Science Produces the Aura of a Human Being

It Varies in Shape and Color According to the Condition of the Patient, and Thus Is an Aid in the Diagnosis of Disease.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

SCIENCE is the god to whom many people say their prayers and make their obeisance.

If the voice of medical science tells a man he must go through an "operation," he meekly bows his head, makes his will and puts himself in the hands of specialists, who not infrequently are butchers; and if the man dies it is always declared that the operation had nothing to do with his death, so absolute is the faith of the multitude pinned to the skirts of Science.

Science does great and wonderful things, but Science claims originality for many things which have been long known to the clear-seeing ages of the world for countless centuries.

Something like fifteen or eighteen years ago that great and good woman, Anna Besant, delivered a lecture in New York city on the Human Aura.

It was my privilege to listen to her, and it was my good fortune to listen with an open mind and to believe she was speaking with the authority of knowledge.

She told of the Aura which surrounded every human being; its colors depending upon the physical and spiritual condition of the person, and she said this aura was visible to those who possessed the clear-seeing eye.

Anna Besant spoke only what had been told for thousands of years by older seers and savants, and her words met the same spirit of skepticism from the majority of educated people (those educated from books) which such truths always meet.

Produces the Aura

Now comes the authoritative voice of medical science saying the very same thing which the wise men of the world have said so long.

Several years ago a French physician made discoveries along this line, and he is followed by Dr. Kilner, of London.

This physician, by the use of certain screens and lights, exhibited, with the assistance of Dr. Feilin, the aura of a patient in his office. Here is what the reporter tells of the exhibition:

"The screens vary in color. Some are red, others blue, varying in depth of color to suit the eyes of the investigator. When Dr. Feilin had briefly explained the processes which led up to Dr. Kilner's actual discovery, he passed with the press representative into a small room in which the subject of the experiments awaited them.

"The subject was a well-made woman of medium height, and apparently in the best of health. Dr. Feilin first of all told her exactly the nature of the experiments he was about to make. Then, having instructed the newspaper man to look steadily at the daylight through one of the spectacularing screens, and set the patient standing upright with legs together and hands on hips, about a foot away from a dead, dull background, facing the only window in the room, he proceeded to draw a dark blind half-way down this window, then from below he threw up a blind of the same color, so overlapped the upper blind sufficiently to allow light so dim to filter into the room that only the white form of the subject's body could be discerned in the gloom.

"'Now turn around,' Dr. Feilin said to the journalist, 'and tell me what you see, or if you see anything at all, for there are perhaps four or five people out of every hundred who, through some inherent defect in the eyesight, are physically unable to perceive the "aura."'

Appears in a Mist or Halo

"For some moments, perhaps a quarter of a minute, the only object that could be made out in the darkness was the subject's form and its outline. Then gradually, as the eye grew accustomed to the darkness, a sort of double mist or halo, the one within the other and the inner one denser than the outer, became more and more distinctly visible.

"The outlines of this mist exactly followed the curves and the contour of the subject's body. The color of the outer aura seemed to be a blue-gray, that of the inner aura was darker; also, apparently, the inner aura was denser. In the triangular space formed by the sides of the body and the angle of the arms, as the subject remained with her hands resting lightly on her hips, the halo could be seen most clearly.

"Presently, acting upon Dr. Feilin's instructions, the subject raised and extended first one arm, then the other. Then she joined her hands at the back of her neck. And always the mist of aura followed, as though it were itself an outline of some sort of shadow of the limbs."

Thoughts Livid Colors

The aura, so the physician relates, varies in shape and color with the physical condition of the patient, and the most practical use can be made of this discovery in the diagnosis of disease.

Of course if medical science pursues this line of research it will be found that the thoughts of the patient color the aura, just as the psychics have declared, and it will be found that by governing the thoughts and controlling the mind disease will disappear, and the aura of health and happiness and right living will develop.

One would think that science would feel somewhat humble since this latest discovery, but it is doubtful if it does.

But the open mind will open still wider its doors of expectancy and be ready to welcome in the wonderful new old truths standing at our threshold. And before many decades pass religion and science will be walking reverently hand in hand.

PART TWO—(Continued)

I LOOKED to the menus with Van Buren, and I discovered that I knew what was good to eat and how to get it, even if I had used to lunch on ten cents a day for more than ten years.

The Tempests

Mrs. Tempest came to call the week I saw Stephen's uncle, but I was out, and she asked us within ten days for dinner.

"Tempest," Stephen said to me, "they tell me is a wife-cuddle man. So was Roxburg. Out of mediocrity Mrs. Tempest has pulled this fellow into position. I am curious to see her; I've heard my uncle speak of her often."

The Tempests had a handsome old house on I street; my husband took the hostess in to dinner and I went in with an Englishman, the first one I ever met. I couldn't understand him hardly at all; it was like a foreign language, pretty nearly.

The moment I looked at Mrs. Tempest, and she gave me her hand and spoke to me in her rich, low voice, something went all through me. I recall her dress that night, of white satin, creamy, like ivory, and no color. At her breast she wore one big gardenia, and after that night she only wore violets.

Her hair was nearly black, so dark and heavy that it seemed aching to get loose from the pins and roll down; she wore it loosely and held up by large shell pins. Her color was warm red under a bloomy skin, with the glow of what Stephen used to call "a sunset peach."

Her lips were carved out boldly, with dents in the corners of her mouth, and so sharp a point on the upper lip that it made you want to put your finger there.

Her eyes kept her from being boldly beautiful; they were soft and shining under her straight, fine brows, and her neck and her arms were maternal, where children would want to nestle and put their heads; and I wondered if she had children, and, if so, how she could wear a dress like that. It was indecent, it was too low, but Mrs. Tempest was so beautiful that I forgave her.

She had no age, she was just superb and brilliant, and Stephen by her side at table turned to her as if she were a sun. I saw it, and right then and there I knew what was going to be.

There were several Cabinet Ministers and a visiting Prince, and Mrs. Tempest shone over the table and put every one at ease. I said to myself, "I'll watch and see how she entertains," but I gave that up. She had begun where I could never get!

And then, too, my heart went out to to my husband as he turned to her that I didn't call it "entertaining" after the soup was taken away. Besides, I didn't have time to observe her any more, for I found out that Washington wasn't Carson City, and I had to take a decided place at once. The men on either side turned to me and began to ask me questions.

After dinner nobody stayed behind in the dining-room to smoke; Mrs. Tempest didn't have it that way. They strolled into the big library, and I found a sofa behind a table, and the room shook itself out round me, the people seeking their friends in groups and pairs, and before I realized it I, myself, was part of a circle, and couldn't blot out my personality.

The Englishman and Mr. Tempest and Senator Bellairs, who had come in after dinner, and a secretary, stood in front of me, and Senator Bellairs dictated at me, and we all talked, and I had to. And then and there I found I didn't hate it as much as I had feared.

The Centre of Things

Stephen came up and joined us, and seemed to have taken an elixir more stimulating than wine. When the man who was speaking when he joined us stopped, my husband took up the subject and went on with it.

And I was proud to have him there, and prouder to watch them listen and watch their faces. When he talked nobody else seemed to have reason for existing.

One by one the others said good-night, and Stephen and his uncle and I were alone; they hadn't spoken directly to each other, so Stephen put out his hand:

"Uncle, I owe everything to you."

Senator Bellairs dropped Stephen's hand like a hot coal, and he put his head back and gave a short, sharp laugh.

"Yes, yes," insisted my husband, earnestly, "you sent for me to France at a critical moment—you shaped my career."

Senator Bellairs glared at him, then looked more softly at me, and murmured:

"Blind as most egotists! But it's evident, my dear boy, that you haven't gone as high yet as you will. Perhaps when you do get at the top you'll—"

Stephen was quite unconscious of what his uncle meant. "I want, above all, uncle," he said, "to go on with some books of yours that I was absorbed in when you put me out of the Fifth avenue house some years ago. I wonder if you have got them in Washington You'll let me come and see, won't you?"

I could see that his uncle was perfectly delighted to see him again. There hadn't been anything dramatic or booky about their meeting; nobody wept on each other's neck, and yet there was something touching to me in it as I saw them shaking hands.

We women would be saved a lot of bother, it seems to me, if we could learn we are not so important after all. We get spoiled by the men often, and our heads turned; it was as plain to me as the nose on your face that Mr. Bazfield was simply crazy about his wife.

Fanny talked about her husband in a patronizing way; she seemed to think she had done him a great honor in marrying him. He wrote her pages and pages every week and he worshipped the two children, and it seemed an awful shame to me to watch Fanny's flirtations.

She accepted, finally, an invitation from some people with whom she had crossed on the ship to go West in a private car. The Count di Pallevi was invited, and she left the children with me.

I never saw my husband as angry as he was when he heard that she had gone, for he really hadn't bothered much about Fanny, and neither of us discussed plans with him. He said that she was a wretched wife and mother, and that he wouldn't have his house made a rendezvous, and I almost wondered if he weren't a little bit jealous that she should have wanted to go. Driving home that night from the Tempests' dinner, Stephen told me that he didn't admire Mrs. Tempest's type.

"She's too sensuous," he said, "too extravagant, luscious. She represents the stormy part of a man's career. Every man," he went on, "has his special type. You'll find that out, and he rarely admires out of it."

Intelligent and Charming

"Well," I thought to myself, "Miss Pardee and Fanny and Mrs. Tempest are all the same kind of woman, only Mrs. Tempest is the most beautiful of them all!" I asked him if he didn't think she was intelligent. He said:

"Very, and very charming. My uncle admires her. She has the social gift. She is a perfect hostess. I don't know when I've been in such agreeable company." And he added: "I dare say she will be a valuable friend for you this year if you cared to consult her."

Then he went on talking about other things, and going home he held my hand; it was a fine night for Winter, the streets were still, the sky overhead blue and bright with stars. He looked so big and dark sitting there in his long coat, and I remembered how people's eyes had sought him at the Tempests', and how he had been listened to.

And it seemed to me as though Stephen could get anywhere. And I had the knowledge that he belonged to me, and, in spite of Mrs. Tempest's beauty, I wasn't unhappy that night.

I planned next day to do a long-postponed errand, and took the carriage and drove to ——— street, and was just getting out when I saw him. Tempest came from Gaits's, the jewellers.

"Why, what errand can you be bent upon, Mrs. Kirkland? You look so——and she paused for a word—"so radiant."

And I said: "I am radiant. I am going in to buy a solitaire diamond ring."

"Heavens!" she laughed. "You speak as though a solitaire were a pound of tea! But no doubt it is in reality a good many pounds of finger."

And I answered, "No, my husband isn't in on the finger deal," for every one in Washington thought he was.

"I don't often come up with people bent upon such brilliant errands," she went on.

I thought her, then, like a well-painted portrait, the ex for in her dark hat coming down on her dark hair, and a big bunch of violets in her coat.

"Haven't I a right to Gaits's with you? Do let me! I am awfully discreet."

I told her I would be glad if she would help me; I wasn't a judge of stones.

I had to buy the ring this morning—I couldn't put it off any longer.

"It's for some friend's engagement, I expect."

And I said no, my husband had told me to buy this stone long ago in Carson City, and I actually hadn't had time yet!

She exclaimed: "Oh, really!" And we went into Gaits's together.

Mrs. Tempest asked for the manager, and we were shown into a private room. The head salesman got out tubes and cases and tissue-papers full of stones from the safes. And he was the first to choose my ring—a black velvet cushion between us.

Buying a Ring

It took a long time. Personally, I would rather have looked through the showcases and selected something entirely by myself, but Mrs. Tempest was kind and interested, and tried the rings on, and her hands were large and ample, with pointed fingers and palms like flowers. Their tips had never been spoiled by the keyboard of a Remington.

"This stone," she said, at last, "is superb, isn't it? I should certainly advise you to take this one, Mrs. Kirkland," and as she turned it round on her finger it did gleam like a star. I put it on above my wedding ring.

Why He Died

A LITTLE girl, aged nine, remarked at the table the other day: "Father, if you did not chew tobacco you would live longer."

To which the father replied: "Daughter, your grandfather chewed tobacco all his life and he lived to be seventy-nine. Your brother never chewed or smoked and he only lived to be seven years of age."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TRY AGAIN TO EXPLAIN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and have been keeping company with a girl about the same age.

About a month ago I promised to take her to a ball, but, having to work later than usual, had to disappoint her. A week later she sent back the ring which I gave her and said not to call on her again.

When I tried to explain to her the reason for the disappointment, she would not listen to me.

Kindly advise me how I can win her love back again, for I know her desires. ANDOUR.

CONTINUE your attentions and efforts to regain her confidence.

After a while try again to explain that the delay was unavoidable. She will doubtless accept your apology and realize that her action was uncalled for.

WAIT AWHILE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and in love with a young man of twenty-three. He has asked me to marry him.

My father approves, but my mother does not, so my friend wishes me to marry him, anyway.

What should I do? V. L.

AS I have said to so many girls in your predicament, do not marry without the consent of your parents.

Any disagreement with one's own people is always sincerely regretted.

Wait a few months, and when your mother realizes that this seems the happiest way she will be glad to give her consent also.

ENOUGH TO MARRY ON

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For the past year and a half I have been keeping company with a young man who is employed in the same office with me.

He thinks a great deal of me, and I, in return, think just as much of him. We are thinking of marriage, but at present his salary is only $15 a month. His prospects are bright. Recently his wages were raised $5 a month.

Would you advise us to get married at present, or do you think it would be better to wait until he is making a little more money? OLIVE.

YES, I advise you to marry.

With economy, I should think you could manage on sixty dollars a month.

It is much better for you to work together than separately. You can help your husband at home, and at the same time your happiness will be an incentive to him.

This, with necessity, will assure his progress.

Lashed, as she is, to the floating log and being straight in front of the stampeding rhinoceros herd, Rosamond yet defies Desperate Desmond and vows her eternal love for Claude Eclaire. The villain gloats over his victim and tells her that Claude is powerless to save her.

When everything seems against one, things usually begin to improve. It is so in the case of Rosamond. As she floats helplessly in front of the maddened rhinoceros herd she hears the reassuring voice of Claude. The Wild Men have quit Desmond and are fighting for the Hero.

Just as the rhinoceros herd is about to swim right over the log to which Rosamond is bound, Gompgoto and Claude devise a plan to save the girl. They drive their spears into the ground, holding the handles they dive under the water.

It is simple work to hold the log high above the ferocious animals, while Claude and his friends, the wild men, are safe below the surface. Desperate Desmond sees that the rhinoceros herd has passed the isle, and proceeds to get into action himself. Seizing an axe, he jumps upon the log.

"I'm the boy," says Desperate Desmond, as he chops away at the log and the ropes which bind Rosamond. He intends to free her from her bondage, but only to escape with the girl in his power. Claude and the wild men, being under water, cannot see what is going on.

The villain falls upon the back of the last rhinoceros with Rosamond in his grasp. Few persons would think of using a rhinoceros to accomplish their purpose, but Desmond is very resourceful. Apparently, Desmond has finally secured the girl. But stay-to-morrow's pictures will tell us what happened.

The Minister and the Tinman

How Caleb Skinner Made His Spare Moments Reward Him

By THOMAS TAPPER.

I.

A RECENT news item states that a Norwegian minister of the Middle West has copied the Bible twice, once in English and once in Norwegian. He did this in the spare time of a few months, and his purpose was to gain "a deeper insight and a broader meaning."

This new item deserves more than a passing notice on our part. Two great facts are impressed by it which are valuable to every reader of this paper.

Let us get at these facts:

William Corbett, the English writer, once said, "The hand is a better remembrancer than the mind." By this he meant that what a man does with the mind fixed on the hand is lasting. Through the mental and physical act he is so impressed that the act itself stays by him; so does that for which the act stands. William Corbett practiced his rule, for, while he rode on horseback through the woods of Virginia, he made, with his own hand, a pocket dictionary of the French language. He tells about this in a book of letters to his son Richard.

When books were less common and more expensive, people read few, but read them much and well. Cheap books tempt us to read many volumes, but few of us learn to read hard enough and long enough to master their contents.

It would be a liberal education to any one to copy with his own hand Dante's Divine Comedy, thinking out every sentence as he wrote it; or Goethe's "Faust"; or a play of Shakespeare; or any other work upon which time has placed its approval.

Few of us will ever do such a thing, and yet the whole secret of mastering a book lies in just such patient, plodding work. You have often heard of the Nine Muses, of the Seven Liberal Arts, of the Seven Wise Men of Greece. Can you name them?

You may reply that you do not need to name them. They are of no use to you. This is probably true. But back of this lies the fact that you would fix them, or any knowledge you need to have, by the simple act of writing; of writing with care, saying the lesson over to yourself just as if you were your own teacher.

Out of such practice we should get what the Norwegian minister was anxious to get "a deeper insight and a broader meaning."

Formerly, before the days of printing, a man who wanted a book had to borrow a manuscript copy and write it out; that is, copy it, for himself. When a man does that, he wants the book very much, and he has it both in his hands and in his head. Everybody reads nowadays. But the broad, careful reader is fast disappearing. This, in turn, affects memory. The more carelessly and hurriedly we read, the less the brain is impressed, and a feeble brain impression cannot be readily brought to the front, or remembered.

II.

The Story of the Peddler

Old Caleb Skinner, the tin peddler, drove his thinware wagon through the New England towns for many years. Skinner could neither read nor write, yet he kept all his accounts in his head as accurately as any man could keep them by a double entry system. He was likewise remarkable for the observations he made from the seat of his cart. The old gray horse he drove knew every road and every house, and made his passage like a machine. Meanwhile Skinner sat aloft thinking out his account against the man in the next house, or noting what the farmer had done since his last trip.

Skinner never talked books, for he could not read them. But, in a sense, he was more entertaining, for he was a book in himself, full of originality, quaint, humorous and overflowing with stories about people in some distant town. Skinner never told a man a story about his own neighbor. Now, many people who profess not to have any real books do not practice this simple courtesy.

So Skinner taught me that the mind that is constantly alert to what is before it, takes in and retains, while the mind that is given to thoughtlessness and hurried action is neither exact nor entertaining. He had discovered in a very homely way that it paid him to read the people who bought his tinware, as the Norwegian minister desired to read the Bible. With "deeper insight and a broader meaning."

When he came to a family that owed him money, when sickness or death had visited them, he always contrived to leave a dollar bill or two somewhere in the kitchen, to be discovered after he had mounted his wagon and started up the old gray horse.

If he can add to this the sympathy that prompts him, when trouble comes to a friend, to leave a dollar bill or two somewhere in the kitchen—then he is by all measurements a man whose insight is deep and whose grasp of meaning is broad.

The De Bercy Affair

TO DAY'S INSTALMENT
By GORDON HOLMES
Copyright, 1910, by Edward J. Clode

"BOASTING is of no avail in defending a charge of murder," said Fureaux. "Before we even begin to take you seriously, Miss Prout, we must know what you actually mean by your words."

A Daring Boast

"I mean this—that I, myself, will appear before Hester Bates in such guise that she will swear it was me, and not Mr. Osborne, whom she saw on the stairs that night.

"If that does not suffice, I shall need Campbell at the corner of Berkeley street. If you can arrange for his presence there, and tell him to drive me to Feldisham Mansions, and he will swear that it was I, and not Mr. Osborne, who gave him that same order on the night of the third of July.

"Surely, if I accomplish so much, you will see Rupert at liberty. Believe me, I am not afraid that you will commit the crowning blunder of arresting me for the murder, after having arrested Janoc, and his sister, and Rupert."

Winter positively started. So did Fureaux. Evidently they were perturbed by the extent of her information. Hylda saw the concern depicted on their faces; she laughed low, musically, full-throated.

"Well, is it a bargain?" she taunted them.

"Of course——" began Winter, and stopped.

There is no denying the weakness of our position if you can do all that," said Fureaux suavely.

"Pray do not let me detain you from visiting the House of Commons," murmured Hylda to Rosalind.

"Perhaps, in the circumstances, you had better wait till to-morrow," said Winter, rising and looking hard at Rosalind.

This man had won her confidence, and she felt that she was in the presence of a tragedy, yet it was hard to yield in the presence of her rival. Tears filled her eyes, and she bowed her head to conceal them.

"Come, mother," she said brokenly. "We are powerless here. It would seem."

Alone me to show you the way out," said Winter, and he hustled forward.

In the corridor, when the door was closed, he caught an arm of each and bent in a whisper.

"Fureaux was sure she would try some desperate move," he breathed. "Rest content now, both of you. If all goes well, your ill-used friend will be with you to-night. Treat him well. He deserves it. He did not open your letter."

"He sacrificed himself in every way for your sake. He even promised to marry that woman, that arch-fiend, in order to—for he is a true man, the soul of honor, rescue you from Janoc. So believe him, and tell him from me that he owes some share of the restitution of his good name in the eyes of the public to your splendid devotion during the past few minutes."

Now often did the Chief Inspector unbend in this fashion. There was no ambiguity in his advice. He meant what he said, and said it so convincingly that Rosalind was radiantly hopeful when she drove away with her mother.

A Worried Butler

It was a scared and worried-looking Jenkins who admitted Hylda Prout and the two detectives to Osborne's flat in Clarges street, Mayfair. These comings and goings of police officers were disconcerting, to put it mildly, and an errand had arrived a few minutes earlier which had ruffled his usual placid acceptance of life as it presented itself.

The Manicure Lady

She Tells George About What She Saw at the Coronation

"IT was some coronation, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I got back from there. I was sorry to be away from the good old United States so long, and I was sorry that I didn't have time to write any articles for the AMERICAN while I was over there but no; the same I had a great time. I never saw so much gilt in my life, not even in a Ringling Bros. parade.

A Blase City Man

"Somehow, George, I couldn't help thinking about one of them circus parades as witnessed in my early girlhood, while I was watching the spangles and the steeds sweeping by. You remember, don't you, George, how your mother and father used to take you down town to see in the morning so as to get a good peek at the parade the day the circus came to town? You remember how the parade used to show up promptly two hours or so after schedule time, and you must remember how your young heart thrilled with joy at the sight of the first gilded wagon, and how you forgot that you had been setting on a curb with a lot of them jaspers from Bloomer and Cadott rubbing their muddy shoes against your new frock?

"I never wore no frock to a parade," said the Head Barber, who refused to be enthused by the word painting of the Manicure Lady. "The only parade I ever got a chance to see was inside the big tent."

"That's because you are one of them real blase city men," said the Manicure Lady.

"On the level, George, there ain't much pity left in my heart no more, but what little is left is for the poor little boobs that was born under the shadow of the gilded dome. What they don't know about boyhood and girlhood would make a book so big that Carnegie wouldn't buy it for his library. Folks don't get rounded out when they are brought up in a city.

Some Simile

"But, as I was saying, I stood and watched that coronation pageant with my two eyes sticking out so far that they looked like baseballs starting out to be three-base hits. Along came the native Princes, on horseback, looking like so many Jack Johnsons, except they rode slower, and somehow, George, I felt sorry for them poor things. With all the gold and glitter around them, still they looked sort of sad and spiritless, and I'd say three to one, if I was a bookmaker like Tom Bliss, that they'd a lot rather be back home drinking them quaint native drinks with coconut in them.

"I see by the papers that the uniforms of the officers looked fine," said the Head Barber. "Some one of the special writers forget which one it was, said that the crimson coats of that splendid body of infantry and cohorts marshaled was like a vast crimson cloud near the western horizon at sunset. That was some simile, wasn't it, kid?"

"Not if you was there," said the Manicure Lady. "If you had been there you would have said it was some simile. And I must tell you about the gold carriage that the King and Queen was riding in. It had eight milk white steeds. Six of them was real milk white, and the other two was sprinkling with the cold. They looked kind of blush, like the milk we get here at home. The King and Queen wasn't way to see. They was but inside the carriage, just like the animals inside the gilt carriages in the parades back home in the circus days. Each animal was painted on the outside in them parades, George, so we would know what wasn't inside.

Raised Doughnuts

There are those who believe that of all the pastry made, doughnuts take the lead. Children like them. To have them rich, but wholesome and digestible, with fine flavor, use Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk.

RECIPE

Dilute six tablespoonfuls Borden's Evaporated Milk with one and two-thirds cups water; scald add one heaping tablespoonful butter, and cool. Add half a cake compressed yeast dissolved in one-half cup luke-warm water, four tablespoonfuls sugar and enough flour to make a batter; beat well, cover, and stand in a moderately warm place over night. In the morning stir in three well-beaten eggs, add a pinch of salt and sufficient flour to make a soft dough; knead lightly, cover, and let rise; when light, take out about half the dough, roll, cut into doughnuts with a large round cutter, and let stand half an hour before frying in smoking hot fat.

Men Don't Want Truth from Women

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THE foundation to man's opposition to the gossip and if she sings of the books giving woman the ballot lies in his knowledge that her desire for it doesn't originate in adoration of his sex.

When she adores him, she sings his praises, and no woman ever sought the right to vote while singing that tune.

It is when she sings his praises that a man slumbers her most, and from this masculine weakness arises man's great contentment with the woman to whom he is engaged, and his greater dissatisfaction with the one he has married.

After they are married these things don't, somehow, seem so historical, and a voice sounds to him as if it needed a new needle.

If she sings of domestic affairs, he says she is narrow and limited and bores him.

If she sings of her neighbors, he says she has read, he throws a disc worn into his opinion of what women read.

If she sings of public affairs, he disproves her venture beyond her four walls, and if there is any time left to her beyond telling him that his bath is ready or dinner is served or he will find his clean shirt in the top bureau drawer and his socks in the bottom one, she doesn't know what it is.

He wants admiration, and upon those little songs is a wife's music book are based most of public liberties he is apt to contribute married as he was engaged, and ends further discomfort when his wife's voice sounds to him as if it needed a new needle.

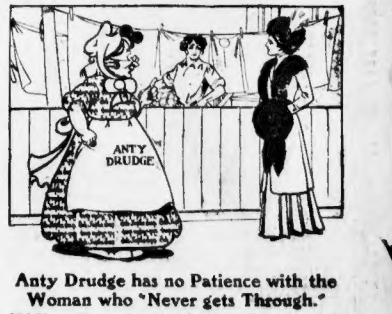
If she sings of domestic affairs, he says she is narrow and limited and bores him.

If she sings of her neighbors, he says she has read, he throws a disc worn into his opinion of what women read.

If she sings of public affairs, he disproves her venture beyond her four walls, and if there is any time left to her beyond telling him that his bath is ready or dinner is served or he will find his clean shirt in the top bureau drawer and his socks in the bottom one, she doesn't know what it is.

He wants admiration, and upon those little songs is a wife's music book are based most of public liberties he is apt to contribute married as he was engaged, and ends further discomfort when his wife sings the TRUTH.

And then does want the truth from women, and that's the truth.



Anty Drudge has no Patience with the Woman who "Never gets Through."

Neighbor—"I am going shopping this afternoon. Lots of bargains advertised. Will you go with me?"

Friend—"What! Go shopping on Monday afternoon! Why I won't be done with my washing until dark."

Anty Drudge—"If you used Fels-Naptha soap, as your neighbors do, you could get done by twelve and have the afternoon for shopping."

What is the cost of your Monday wash?

Isn't it what you expend of muscle strength, nerve force and health?

Do you know that you can cut this "labor cost" in two by using Fels-Naptha soap?

Fels-Naptha is the "new way" soap. It lifts the load because it is a scientific soap. It atomizes the dirt—dissolves it into minute particles; and loosens them from the fabric.

You soap the clothes with Fels-Naptha, roll them and soak for half an hour in cool or luke-warm water.

While you attend to other household duties, Fels-Naptha is doing the hard part of your washing. After rubbing lightly, rinse and the wash is done. Easy, isn't it?

Why not cut the "labor cost" in two? Try once, follow directions on the red and green wrapper, and you will know the difference.

It Is the Easiest

Thing in the World to Win One of the Rich Prizes in the American's $10,000 Proverb Contest!

You May Start Today, Tomorrow, Any Time!

SEND FOR PROVERB BOOK AND BACK NUMBERS

1000 Prizes Absolutely Free!

Notice to All American Readers

The attention of the Contest Department has been called to the fact that certain unscrupulous persons are attempting to dupe contestants in the Proverb Contest by offering and advertising for sale "Solutions of the Proverb Puzzles."

The precautions taken by the Boston AMERICAN to prevent the correct solutions from becoming known to anyone make it absolutely impossible for outsiders to do anything but guess at the correct solutions.

Persons who thus attempt to mislead contestants may be instantly named as fakers, and contestants who purchase their so-called solutions are jeopardizing their own chances in the contest.

Moreover, certain others have issued booklets containing proverbs and purporting to be "guaranteed to contain all of the proverbs used in the puzzle pictures."

ALL OF THOSE PUBLICATIONS ARE UNOFFICIAL AND UNAUTHORITATIVE, AND CONTESTANTS ARE WARNED AGAINST THEM!

There was a veritable "run" on back numbers and PROVERB BOOKS at the Contest Department yesterday.

Those who missed the first puzzle pictures in the AMERICAN'S $10,000 Prize Contest have been quick to see the advantage of obtaining the back copies of these pictures and answer blanks which enables one to engage at any time in the battle of wits for the big prizes.

They have also begun to realize the advisability of equipping themselves with the AMERICAN'S PROVERB BOOK.

The demand for back numbers and PROVERB BOOKS from out-of-town readers shows that the great Proverb Contest is enlisting enthusiastic contestants throughout New England. The demand in the city shows that there is even more local interest in the Proverb Contest than there was in the great $15,000 Contest.

The beauty of this competition is that every contestant is on an absolutely equal footing with all other contestants. Any of the proverbs which will be represented by the puzzle pictures are within easy reach of all. And the AMERICAN'S PROVERB BOOK contains all of the proverbs used in the contest, and can be had at the "Proverb Contest Department" at 25c a copy.

The AMERICAN'S PROVERB BOOK is the only authorized publication in this contest. Any publications of a similar nature, purporting to be of use in solving the puzzle pictures, are not sanctioned by the AMERICAN, and readers who purchase such booklets will do so at their own risk.

In the official book there are more than 3,000 proverbs. The volume is handily arranged and very attractively printed, and may be taken as the authority for the exact wording of the proverbs.

Everyone is urged to enter the Proverb Contest.

There is no red tape, or trouble, or cost, by entering. The way to do it is simply to solve today's puzzle picture, to-morrow's and the next day's, and so on. In the meanwhile, send to the "Proverb Contest Department, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.," for the back numbers of any pictures you may have missed. This will complete your set to date, and will place you in the fighting line for the beautiful $2,500 Seashore Bungalow Home, or a handsome Automobile, or a beautiful Motor Boat, or a Piano, or any of the 1,000 prizes, a full list of which is printed herewith. The back numbers may be had at the regular rates of the AMERICAN (plus return postage).

If you have not already done so, send to-day for the PROVERB BOOK, and any back numbers you may need.

This contest only covers a period of seventy-five (75) days, and at the end of that time 1,000 AMERICAN readers will be benefited to the extent of $10,000 in prizes.

This competition is open to all who live in New England, irrespective of age, creed, color, sex or any other restriction of any kind.

There will probably never be such a magnificent offer made to the readers of any newspaper, in which there is absolutely no work involved except a little daily mental exercise.

Get in the game!

YOU, and YOU, and YOU, have just as good a chance of obtaining for your very own this $2,500 Seashore Home as any other person in New England.

Everybody is on an equal basis.

Hold all answers until you have the entire set. No set will be considered if sent in before the publication of the last picture.

Conditions of the Contest. Read Carefully.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment, open to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, bu each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in England either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participants in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there should be no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not delay your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and send them all in at once.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

Any contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions to these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

Retain Chairman Hall — The Public Needs Him on the Railroad Commission

There appears to be a plan, which, in its evil significance, smacks of a conspiracy, abroad in certain corporation circles to remove Chairman Walter Perley Hall from the Board of Railroad Commissioners, where he is now FAITHFULLY and WELL serving the public interests.

The boldness, or perhaps the craftiness, of the scheme will be appreciated when it is known that it involves the unwitting participation of Governor Foss.

This appears to be the way the ingenious conspirators have worked out the details. Mr. Hall is a high class man. He is an UPRIGHT man, and so far has been an independent, FEARLESS railroad commissioner. These are qualifications for his important office which make his service INVALUABLE TO THE PUBLIC, but dangerous to railroads and street railways that want to do things which the Railroad Commission was created to prevent; and also very annoying and humiliating to his colleagues, for his virtue "glittering o'er their faults shows more goodly and attracts more eyes than that which hath not foil to set it off."

Therefore it is proposed to transfer Mr. Hall to the Superior bench, where his salary will be greater and his tenure will be for life. But this would be a grave MISFORTUNE to the Commonwealth. We need him for the Railroad Commission. We need his sterling worth there while it lasts, and the INTERESTS have not yet succeeded in diminishing it.

Both the powers and the salary of Mr. Hall should be increased, and he should be given a colleague who is of his own metal, in the place of Mr. White.

The position of a Railroad Commissioner can be made at least as important as that of a Justice of our Supreme Court.

Mr. Hall ought to be induced to STAY where he is doing so much good for the public service, and is meeting with so much public approbation.

A Dollar in Wise Advertising Is as Good as a Dollar in Bonds

Dollar for Dollar, the Intelligent Advertisement Pays Better Than Any Office Building, Bank, Factory or Stocks.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner

Some young men engaged in the advertising business have asked advice as to the best KIND of work in the advertising line for a young man to take up.

The best kind of work in any line is the most HONEST, the kind that gives the best results to those that patronize it. If you go into business, go into a good, HONEST business. If you undertake to advertise something, undertake something of which you can be PROUD, something that you would sell to your own brother as well as to strangers.

If you are proprietor as well as advertiser of the article, make sure that you are not throwing away your time and your money in advertising what is not good. A man who puts money into advertising ought to feel that his money is as permanently and safely INVESTED as though he had put it into brick, mortar or building material of any kind. Every dollar in advertising should be a brick in a structure that will permanently pay on the investment.

Many men have built up an advertising reputation, an advertising structure of words, facts and publicity, worth more per dollar than any investment in railroads or hotels or business blocks.

The advertisement that lasts and continues must be the advertisement of something worthy, otherwise every dollar of advertising means a dollar spent in enlightening the people concerning a fraud, and it means the end of the enterprise just so much sooner.

The man who advertises in the right direction prides himself on having the confidence of the people and earning it. He looks upon advertising simply as a SHORT ROAD to public confidence. And this is the day of short roads.

The young advertiser should connect himself with a concern that gives the people value. In working for such a concern he can talk SINCERELY, and only the man who can talk sincerely and work sincerely can grow in his line of work. Get the right thing, advertise it, and yourself, and prosper.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

ROCKING THE BOAT

Editor AMERICAN:

A few lines of warning of the danger in foolish sport in your highly admired editorials would save many a young person from premature death and many a home from avoidable confidence and inconsolable sorrow and regret.

Foolish "stunts" and ostentatious display of so-called bravery in rowboats claim hundreds of victims during the Summer.

It is a favorite sport of some foppish gentlemen to row far out and there endeavor to bring forth, by extreme foolery, laughter and commendation from their women companions. S. H. GREEN.

PRAISES MR. BRANDEIS

Editor AMERICAN:

Some day it is to be hoped the name of Louis D. Brandeis will be classed among the illustrious Governors of Massachusetts.

He is rightly called the "People's Champion;" his untiring efforts in waging the people's battles are worthy of profound gratitude; his attitude on all questions affecting the common people's interests are righteous, progressive, patriotic and just.

Would that we had more such characters in public life to-day—both courageous and honest. L. M. BRIAND.

Lawrence, Mass.

WANTS CARS, NOT SIGNS

Editor AMERICAN:

If the officials of the Boston Elevated would remove the signs at the Dudley street terminal marked "Women First, Please," which would indicate to visitors and strangers, who are ignorant of the truth, that the male population of Boston were a lot of beasts, and do their part by putting on sufficient cars to accommodate both men and women, the need for such unsightly, suggestive signs—needed so that it wounds every man who has to use this thoroughfare and see them in going and coming daily to and from his work—would be done away with. But they are doing in this as is too often done in such cases, where great corporations refuse to shoulder their responsibilities and by placing them where they do not belong think they have fooled the general public. But they have not done so in this case.

GEO. E. SARGENT.

A reader and admirer of the AMERICAN. No. 17 Geneva avenue, Dorchester.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Editor AMERICAN:

I have read your many good editorials on woman suffrage. I would like to say a few words as an American and a Yankee. I wish to thank you for upholding what seems to be the good American citizen sound principles, based upon common honesty and decency. My ideas in regard to women voting are to let them have equal rights. They have to suffer for corrupt government. Give them at least the chance and some implements to free themselves from misery. Would any of these men who are so opposed to woman suffrage dare to say that if a man and a woman be seen struggling for their lives in the water they would favor throwing a line to save the man and think the foolish to throw one to the woman? There are many learned men who believe it better to leave women in slavery. But I, for one believe that the least a man can do is to allow them the opportunity to create men and tools to get themselves out.

Get Into the Great Proverb Contest Now

If You Haven't Seen the Back Puzzle Pictures GET THM TODAY and Have a Try for the $2,500 Seaside Bungalow or One of the 999 Other Valuable Prizes.

If a picture of a city street were printed in the AMERICAN and a fine, big rooster were shown sauntering from curb to curb, and if you were asked, what Joemiller query does this represent, from every direction would come the response:

"Why does a chicken cross the street?"

This is a conundrum and it differs from a PROVERB in that the answer to the conundrum isn't of any particular value after you get it, while when you resolve a picture into a proverb you have something of value—a GREAT TRUTH reduced to its lowest terms.

This all has reference to the great Proverb Contest that is running in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN—the AMERICAN'S Summer School to BRIGHTEN THE WITS and REFRESH THE MEMORIES of all the old and young pupils of New England. As one swings a light pair of dumbbells to stengthen the muscles, so one may apply his mind to the solution of this remarkable series of pictures to keep the cobwebs brushed from the intellect.

This contest has been going on for a couple of weeks, and for one reason and another many persons failed to see the first pictures and have concluded that there is no use in taking up the attractive competition at this time. This idea is a MISTAKE.

You may enter the contest TO-DAY just as well as you could two weeks ago and have just as good a chance at getting that fine SEASHORE BUNGALOW worth $2,500 as any of the other contestants, by sending to the Proverb Contest Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 275 Devonshire street, Boston, for ALL THE BACK PICTURES.

This bungalow, by the way, is only one of the 1,000 prizes that are to go to those who send the best solutions to the series of pictures. These 1,000 prizes are all useful and valuable. Among them are such delightful articles as an automobile, a motor boat, a piano and so on. This affords every contestant a good chance to land ONE OF THE PRIZES even if the top-notch one is missed.

Besides the pleasure that one gets in solving these attractive puzzles, there is a decided educational value to the contest. The mind is strengthened and the memory improved by the work.

Probably the most pleasant feature of it all is that one may solve the puzzles at odd moments and at any place—on the veranda at home, at the seaside, in the mountains, just wherever you happen to be—and it will be of infinitely more value to you than frittering away your leisure on a novel that was only meant to KILL TIME.

To most participants the fact that they GOT 'EM ALL RIGHT would be sufficient recompense for the time and study given to their solution.

But the AMERICAN has felt that it would stimulate the interest of those taking part in the big contest if it were made to their FINANCIAL advantage to take hold of the matter with a vigor that meant success. Hence, the 1,000 valuable prizes, headed with the $2,800 SEASIDE BUNGALOW, as pay for your pains.

Get in and GET SOMETHING. Get in NOW. All you have to do, if you have not entered the contest, is to get the back pictures, solve them and then get the pictures as they appear in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN and solve them, keeping at it until the contest closes.

Some one who has not figured out a single picture yet MAY GET THE SEASIDE BUNGALOW.

Her face don't frontispiece no books
And she's stumpy-like behind.
There's a big bright patch over one bright eye
And her laigs ain't true to lines
But lose or win—she'll stick like sin—
That ol' bulldawg o' mine.

Her face was built on a careless scheme,
Like they grabbed her features raw
And joined 'em up in a drunken dream—
Till the face was mostly jaw.
She's got an ugly sort of a growl
That for cranks is a danger sign;
But ev'ry child goes almost wild
'Bout that ol' bulldawg o' mine.

She knows she ain't no bloomin' peach,
But just the same she's proud
And the mutt that comes within her reach
Don't bark TOO bloomin' loud.
She treats along on her ol' bowlaigs
Like each lyin' thing was fine;
But big or small gives her the wall—
That ol' bulldawg o' mine.

For though yuh're borned with a pedigree
And yeh brag about yuhr birth,
The guy that's got no family tree
Has got HIS right on earth.
For handsome is as handsome does—
Yuh can play it down the line;
The guy that's square is the gent that's there—
Like that ol' bulldawg o' mine.

Praise for the AMERICAN'S Reports of the Bull Will Case

Editor AMERICAN:

I wish to express my appreciation and the appreciation of my client, Mrs. Olen Bull Vaughan, of the excellent manner in which the Boston AMERICAN has reported the hearings in the Bull will contest in the York County, Maine, Probate Court.

Though much of the evidence was sensational—and Mrs. Vaughan very much regrets many of the disclosures regarding her unfortunate mother—yet I am of the opinion that a distinct good has been accomplished by the presentation, through the columns of your newspaper, of that portion of the evidence which disclosed the practices in the occult Indian mysticisms and philosophies, and also the harm resulting from psychic indulgence.

My opinion in this regard is strengthened by many letters which I have received during the progress of the trial from people in various parts of the country.

Very truly yours,

RALPH S. BARTLETT.
